Home Butchering Hints Furnished

Proper meat curing, smoking and storing were advocated this week by E. D. Farrell, animal husbandry specialist at Michigan State College, for success in home butchering.

Fresh meat should be chilled promptly after slaughter to 35 to 40 degrees Fahrenheit and kept there during the curing process. For a dry cure for each 100 pounds of meat, Farrell recommends: 500 pounds of salt, two pounds of sugar, and two ounces of salt peter. For brine cure, these ingredients are mixed with four gallons of water for each 100 pounds of meat. For hams and shoulders, two-and-one-half to three days are needed per pound for curing each piece and two days per pound per piece for bacon. For dry cure, rub one-half of the curing mixture on the meat and pack in a clean wooden barrel or crock, taking care not to shake off the curing mixture. After six to eight days, remove the meat and resalt with the rest of the mixture.

If a brine solution is used, pack the fresh cuts in a clean barrel or crock and cover with brine. Boiling water that has been cooled should be used in making the brine solution. Keep the meat under this brine. The meat should be taken out of the brine three times at weekly intervals and the top cuts turned over and placed in the bottom.

After curing, wash meat in warm water and soak in cool water for an hour before hanging in the smokehouse. Let the meat drain for 24 hours and then smoke with any green hardwood. Hang meat six to eight feet from fire and smoke about 36 hours with a slow fire.

Meat should be wrapped in grease resistant paper and placed in a protective bag for storing. Keep in a dark, cool, dry place.

COUNTY MAN WINS NATIONAL CONTEST WITH CORN YIELD

Arnold Cogger, of South Lyon, has been named 1948 Oakland County corn growing champion for producing 96.59 bushels of DeKalb corn per acre on his farm near South Lyon. The information was received from the headquarters of the 1948 National DeKalb Selected 5-Acre Corn Growing Contest. This record yield wins for Cogger the coveted County Corn King plaque presented each year to the farmer producing the county's largest officially checked yield in the DeKalb Contest. Cogger's winning cornfield was checked by disinterested parties and information gained by the study of growing practices among the 5,000 farmers who competed will be used to help other farmers improve their corn yield. This is the eleventh annual contest with farmers from 22 states and Canada participating. Primary purpose of the contest is to encourage better farming practices. Other outstanding yields in the contest this year made by farmers in Oakland county were: J. J. Mathis, second place, with 90.65 bushels, and C. B. Stanard, third place, with 33.77 bushels.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Schreiber and daughter, Margaret, attended the Detroit Schoolmen's Glee Club Christmas party at Cass High School on Wednesday, December 15. Mr. Schreiber is a member of the chorus.
