WASHINGTON DIGEST

Woodrow Wilson took the oath on Sunday, March 4, 1917, in the President's room in the Capitol, no President had ventured to keep the law and violate the Sabbath.
President Monroe on succeeding himself had announced simply that he would take the oath on Monday, March 5. In 1849, the same thing occurred in the case of President Zachary Taylor. But for some reason, President Rutherford Hayes actually became President before his time. He was secretly sworn in on Saturday, the third, the ceremony being repeated on the fifth, in public.

For some years it has been considered necessary for an outgoing President, if there is one, to take part in the ceremony. His presence has been as much expected in the carriage or automobile which carries both men to the Capitol as the President-Elect. This was not always so, and both the Adamses made it a point to absent themselves, the former leaving the city before the ceremony and the other taking a horseback ride at the moment when the guns boomed out the salute to his bitterly-hated opponent.

Perhaps the inaugural day first began to take on its present complexion with the advent of President James Madison. President Monroe, who followed him, gave us another precedent — the presence of the Marine band. But it was left to Martin Van Buren to bear a unique honor. He was the first American-born citizen to hold that office. Up until his time the Presidents were all former British subjects.

Because of the war and a desire to emphasize the "fourth-term" as little as possible, 1945 inauguration ceremonies of Franklin D. Roosevelt took place on the White House portico instead of on a platform on the east front of the Capitol building which is now accepted as the usual location.

No outgoing President will ride with Harry Truman this year, but one ex-president may attend the ceremonies. The warm feeling which exists between the former small-town boy from Missouri and the wealthy retired engineer will undoubtedly assure Herbert Hoover a place of honor if he wishes to accept it.

Michigan Pictures To Be Shown At Cranbrook

APPLE ORCHARDS ALONG TRAVERSE BAY, by Aaron Bohrod, is one of the most popular of the 100 paintings of present-day life in Michigan, as interpreted in The J. L. Hudson Company collection, MICHIGAN ON CANVAS.

"Michigan on Canvas", the collection of 100 paintings which portray present-day life in the State of Michigan, will be on exhibition in The Museum of the Cranbrook Academy of Art, Bloomfield Hills, from Tuesday afternoon, January 11, through Sunday, January 23, and all residents of Oakland County and nearby communities are cordially invited to view it. During 1948 the collection had 17 exhibitions in leading cities of Michigan and was seen by more than 750,000 people. Thousands of Michigan school children have visited the exhibition and for them it has proven to be of great educational value.

The project was sponsored by The J. L. Hudson Company, of Detroit, for the enjoyment of the people of Michigan. The paintings were done by ten of America's outstanding artists, and their subjects include industry, agriculture, lake shipping, wild life, education, transportation, native festivals, recreation — in fact, nearly everything which goes to make up today's pattern of living in the great State of Michigan.

Commenting on the collection, Mr. J. B. Webber, Jr., vice president and general manager of The J. L. Hudson Company, said "The 'Michigan on Canvas' art collection was sponsored by Hudson's as a worthy and unusual project to portray artistically to the people of Michigan the assets of their great State, its unique advantages, its singular beauty and its varied pattern of living. Practically every scene of life in Michigan has been interestingly interpreted by the artists, each of whom was given complete freedom in his selection of subjects and his style of execution. Thus, there is wide variety in the paintings which gives a refreshing change of pace to the series as a whole."

"We feel that the collection portrays a good cross-section of present-day life in our State and that every Michigan resident who sees it will recognize many locations or many activities in which he has a personal interest, as a result of past experience."

Although sponsored by a Detroit organization, the paintings made in or near Detroit do not dominate the collection. Subjects of particular interest to people of this area include "A Glimpse of Cranbrook", by Aaron Bohrod; "STAMPING PRESSMEN", Fisher Body Plant, Pontiac; "Ambassador Bridge" and "Downtown Detroit" by Carlos Lopez; "Lake St. Clair" by Arnold Blanch; "Summer on Belle Isle" and "Feeding Time", Detroit Zoo, by John DeMartelly; and "Lake Freighters" by David Fredenthal, who studied at Cranbrook under Zoltan Sepeshy.

Two artists, Joe Jones and Adolph Dehn, did all of their twenty-seven paintings on scenes in the Upper Peninsula, including iron and copper mining, lumbering, farming, waterfalls, vacationing scenic beauty.

The project was launched in November, 1946, and the ten artists were chosen by an Advisory Board whose members included Frank Atwood Almy, director of the Hackley Art Gallery; Clyde H. Burroughs, former secretary of the Detroit Institute of Arts; Albert Christ-Janer, former director of the Museum and Library at Cranbrook Academy of Art, Bloomfield Hills; Miss Marion L. Dickinson, former director of the Kalamazoo Institute of Arts; Richard B. Freeman, former director of the Flint Institute of Arts; E. P. Richardson, director of the Detroit Institute of Arts; and Richard Yonkers, director of the Grand Rapids Art Gallery.

Zoltan Sepeshy, director of the Painting Department of the Cranbrook Academy of Art, was one of the ten artists chosen to work on the project. He has ten paintings in the collection, all of them done near Frankfort, on Lake Michigan. They include his interpretations of sand dunes, fishing birds, ferns, dunes, and others which typify life in that area.

Exhibition hours will be from 2:00 to 5:00 daily, January 11 through January 23. The Museum is closed on Mondays, open on Sundays. School groups will be scheduled for morning hours, and any school which wishes to arrange a time for one or more groups should telephone Birmingham 5100 and ask for the Museum. There is no charge for admission.

Following its exhibition at Cranbrook, "Michigan on Canvas" will be shown successively in Monroe, Battle Creek, Port Huron and Alpena, then in six Upper Peninsula cities, from July 2 through August 24 it will hang on Mackinac Island in the Original Warehouse of the American Fur Company, organized by John Jacob Astor. From September 2 through September 11 it will be a featured attraction at the 100th Michigan State Fair. By the end of 1949, all Michigan residents will have had an opportunity to view the paintings at some conveniently located exhibition.
