Curriculum Angling
Angling is now included as a regular part of the curriculum in some of our leading colleges and universities. Angling has become a billion-dollar business in the United States with 40 cents out of every sports dollar being spent in this agreeable pursuit. At the University of Miami, coed anglers are given instruction in the fundamentals of angling and in all branches of the sport. The course requires eight weeks of competition and emphasis is placed on practical value. The student not only learns about methods of fishing, but how tackle is made, how fishing camps are operated, and how to become a successful fishing guide. It is the only class in which it is not necessary to assign home work. The students are simply told to go out and fish, and it is a command that is enthusiastically received and carried out.

WARNING DELIVERED BY CHINESE PRIEST

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL. — SOUNDPHOTO — "Don't make five million Chinese your enemies by letting them fall into the hands of the Communists," pleads the Rev. John T. S. Mat, 36 (right), chancellor of the Archdiocese of San Francisco, as he arrived here aboard the liner General Miles. He is shown pointing out San Francisco's landmarks to (from top) Peter T. H. Mao, brother of the priest; Beatrice Young, Jeanne Chen and Helena Young.

SHAKEUP HITS PROBE COMMITTEE

One of the interesting changes wrought by the election was the reorganization of the un-American activities committee. This strange child, born of a desire of one Democratic congressman to check Nazi and anti-Jewish activity in this country back in the days of Hitler had become a problem child for the administration.

The father of the idea (it was a New York congressman), saw his offspring kidnapped at birth. It was seized by Republican Hamilton Fish of New York and later by Rep. Martin Dies of Texas and brought up in quite a different manner. The Washington scene this time was a different one. The Democrats were pretty embarrassed with the committee before Dies was through with it, and when he decided to withdraw from the Washington scene they tried to squelch it but failed. It had proved too good a headline getter for its members. Then along came the Republicans in 1946 and grabbed it, making it one of the administration's number one headaches.

As soon as Democrats returned to power they saw to it that the committee now an accepted institution, was cleaned up. By one twist and another, they managed to eliminate all of the old members but one, Representative Wood, who is chairman. Membership was limited to lawyers, which was logical enough, for its faults were those which no honest lawyer would condone, and it was reformed to recognize civil rights and to conform to some of the fundamental principles of justice and civil rights with which the original organization scorned to bother. Witnesses are now permitted to give their side of the case, be represented by counsel if they desire.

Nothing has been done to hamper its effectiveness, and it should be able to render a real service from now on. As Representative John McSwainey (D. Ohio) one of the new members, said: "The spy hunt should be carried to a logical conclusion, but I will not permit innocent men and women to have their names and character blemished by unfounded and unsupported accusations."

The un-American activities committee, as it was run before it was cleaned up was an institution which simply could not continue to exist in America. It used methods which Americans will not tolerate, be-

BEST SEASON TO CUT BUILDING LOGS IS IN WINTER TIME

The interest in building rustic summer homes or hunting lodges in Michigan has prompted R. C. Decker, Michigan State College forester, to pass along a few tips on the cuts of logs to be used for these buildings.

He recommends Northern white cedar as the most durable wood growing in Michigan suitable for rustic structures. Late fall or winter is the best time for cutting and peeling logs because they will not check or crack so much while seasoning. Insect and fungi activity is dormant then and log damage is less likely.

Careful piling and seasoning are advised to prevent the troubles that come from using green wood.

Legume Value
Good legumes such as alfalfa or sweet clover improve soils in a number of ways. Their action in fixing atmospheric nitrogen is well known. A less publicized but equally important function of legumes is their effect on the tilth of soils. Legumes increase the granulation of soils, thereby reducing their susceptibility to erosion, increasing their moisture capacity, improving aeration, and allowing better drainage.

all under rigid party discipline. There are known to be a number of similar groups, doubtless working the same party techniques in this country. In some places they are considerably weaker than they are used to be.

The report is a 14,000 word document which presents the Communists' own views on their position, in Canadian universities. It reveals to Dr. Kirkconnell that there are militant Communist nuclei on the campuses at McGill, Toronto, Winnipeg, Saskatchewan, Edmonton and Vancouver.
