Motorhome Provides Real Living Space

COSTS FAR LESS THAN IT LOOKS. This motor home, The Swinger, is self-contained, has pleasing horse-like decor inside, offers plenty of storage space. Easy to handle, too.

Self-Contained Unit Adds Luxury Of Indoors to Great Outdoors

Vacationing Americans see the country in many ways — by car and motels, by car and travel trailer, by motorcycle and pup tent, even by flying their own private airplane.

Each in its unique way affords a choice in fulfilling one's craving for adventure and relaxation in the great outdoors.

But now the choice has been broadened in a manner which wraps up just about every desirable aspect of these modes of travel, except possibly the motorcycle and the airplane, in a single vehicle for the greater enjoyment and convenience of families or groups of fishermen or hunters or amateur photographers.

The new facility is the modern motorhome — not to be confused with the mobile home, for the former has mobility far in excess of the latter.

The motorhome, brought to its ultimate refinement on behalf of vacationers by Avco, is in fact a fully self-contained home on wheels, built and equipped to go anywhere the driver wants it to go and to stop anywhere for overnight or longer.

Swing Off Road

It's so rugged, you can swing it off the road wherever parking is permitted. No worry about the availability of utilities, for everything necessary to normal comfort in one's own home, even to the point where you figuratively "put the cat out" and lock up securely for the night, is built in.

Yes, that includes meal-making equipment, lighting for leisurely living-room-like reading, watching what's on the air, sleeping as confidently relaxed as one does at home, plus lavatory facilities, all operable without the customary hook-ups required for other types of personalized vacation-time travel.

This complete homelike convenience is made possible by Avco because, included in the motorhome is its own power generating unit.

Under Own Power

But none of this is at the expense of the mobility of this immensely modern vehicle. It moves along the roads under its own power, allowing vacationers to ride high above normal traffic and thus have a clearer view of the passing panorama.

Motorhomes, such as Avco's all-fiberglass Grand Lodge, provide families with adequate living space and comforts similar to those at home. This is particularly helpful for mothers who have children to care for, vacation or not.

In a motorhome, children have room to move about, play table games, draw pictures, sleep comfortably, or even take a bath while father drives on.

The Grand Lodge is just as great for father, who has to do the driving. Handling this 27-foot motorhome is as easy as driving a car, yet more comfortable. The luxurious driver's seat does double duty: it gives him a high panoramic view of the road when camping, it serves as an armchair.

Family Comfort

The interior layout and conveniences in the Grand Lodge are designed to appeal to the whole family.
