Meadowbrook To Hold Millionaires Party

The roulette wheels of Las Vegas will be transferred to Meadowbrook Country Club this Saturday night, at the club's Millionaire's Party. As each gambler-to-be enters the clubhouse, he'll be handed three hundred thousand dollars in bogus money to spend after the buffet dinner.

Co-chairmen Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Lucal have asked members to donate hams and turkeys for the affair. And because it is a pre-season calendar item, members will be doing all the work.

Scullery maids for baking the meats and beans, even to cleaning radishes, will be Mrs. George Sheldon, Mrs. Fred Sheldon, Mrs. George Whybrew, Mrs. Ross Quackinbush, Mrs. William F. Newberry, Mrs. Glenn Sleser and Mrs. William E. White.

Mr. Lucal and Mr. White, who claim to be experts at meat carving, will portion out the ham and turkey, while the other male members have been assigned to KP duty.

Hugh H. Rader, Jr., and James Phelan will don black bow ties with white shirts and white ties, the couple for the evening. Wearing similar apparel will be C. E. Stricker and George W. Cosper, Jr., who will be behind the bar tending orders.

The William M. Cuttings will have in their party Mr. and Mrs. James Hough, Mr. and Mrs. Don Matzen, of Northville, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Johnston and the Robert Orthwein. A foursome attending together will be the A. C. Bowers, Jr. Mr. and Mrs. John H. Ruen, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel J. Henry and the Thomas Morans.

Firemen Trade New Fire Truck For Donkeys

Donkey Olympics is shaping into finished form for the performance April 23 in the High School Gym at 8:15 p.m.

Miss Ruth Voezke, working with in the Fire Department, which is sponsoring the show for the benefit of a children's toboggan slide in the city park, reports everything is in readiness. One dozen burros, specially trained, will come to Farmington to replace for an evening the noisy red truck of the firemen.

The burros will co-star in 10 acts, one of which will be a ruckus called the Gypsy Rose Lee relay race, an Annie Oakley Archery Contest, and a musical merry-go-round.

An announcer in the role of Bill Stern will set the scenes of the various acts with the story of Zorro, the circus clown who started the donkeys on their way to fame.

Two local men, Bob Rozenboom impersonating Jack Dempsey, and John Spaller as Joe Louis, will mount donkeys and slug their way to victory or defeat in an act of "Blindfold Boxing" — a la donkey, of course.

The local fire department will star in all the acts, riding the donkeys on their attempt to win races, make donkeys move, and provide the audience with chuckles.

Tourist Exhibit Opens This Year

The tourist and resort exhibit which drew thousands of visitors in January will be open to the public again April 25 at the campus of Michigan State College. C. A. Gunn of the agricultural engineering department said many tourist and resort operators and innkeepers building or finishing private summer cottages continue to seek more information.

The exhibit is in the basement of the new agricultural engineering building on the southeast corner of Michigan State College at East Lansing.

A one-room cottage, completely furnished, is featured in the display. This was designed and built by MSU specialists to illustrate some of the planning principles that can be applied in building new or remodeling old tourist facilities.

Dear Editor:

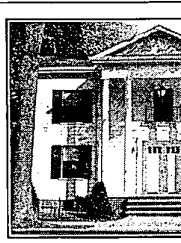

A mistake was made in the write-up concerning Charley Johnston's 50th birthday party. The Sunshine Lady does not put on the parties. The Grimts have been doing it for two years. Mrs. Grace Alman made the birthday cakes.

Sincerely Yours,
Mrs. Fred Grimt.

Sorry, my mistake. Should have given credit where credit was due. These parties are greatly appreciated by the patients, who are well aware of who gives them.

Senate bill 14 would abolish the hospital survey and construction offices transferring duties to the department of administration. Senate bill 15 would eliminate the state safety commission with its $16,000 budget. Senate bill 16 would create a professional and vocational licensing division within office of secretary of state. Senate bill 17 would abolish the stream control commission, transferring duties to the state health department.

Senate bill 19 would transfer duties of the board of control for vocational education, state tenure commission, state board for libraries, and historical commission all to the state board of education. The crippled children's department would be abolished and its duties transferred to the department of health by Senate Bill 20.

Senate bill 21 would abolish the tuberculosis sanatorium commission and transfer duties to the department of health. The board of tax appeals would be abolished by senate bill 22. Some functions of most of the above agencies would be transferred to other departments, services would be continued and hence cost less.

The paradox of public benefits and public taxes was neatly presented by representatives of Michigan industries who appeared at a legislative hearing recently. They urged the legislature to authorize municipal excise taxes, but opposed any public referendum on them. They say we won't tax themselves to pay for things they want, city officials complained.

This attitude of trying to get something for nothing is new, of course. Local governments always favor more state aid and more federal aid, so long as the money appears to be free. The very minute the benefits are linked to taxes, then the spending fever begins to subside.

The legislature has a most difficult task to perform. Regardless of what is done, the decision will be unpopular with some blocs and special interests. Higher taxes or economies that really hurt — which will it be?
