ITS LIKE THIS!!

For weeks and weeks we've ranted and raved on in our silly manner about the stuff we have for sale. Now this week we want to give you something absolutely free, but we don't want you to take advantage of this offer if you won't follow it thru. That would be just like us advertising something at way below cost just to get you to come in and see us, then when you got here we would just be out of it. You see it's like this. We have joined an organization that is trying to convince you that "The American Way" is the best way. We have spent a small sum of money along with other merchants to publish an album. This is in conjunction with programs that are being broadcast over radio station WJR.

Now, we have a limited number of blanks that all you have to do is ask for. We will gladly give you one, the only stipulation being that you fill in your name and address, put the blank into an envelope, and mail it to the radio station. On second thought, it guess it isn't absolutely free for you have to put on a three cent stamp, but the cost is small, isn't it?? In return for all this effort on your part, the radio station will mail you free one of these albums. They have a lot of reading material in them and a lot of pictures. This is all done in a comparative manner to show you, without a doubt, the American Way is the best way. If you are interested please feel free to stop in and get a blank. You do not have to be one of our regular customers to take advantage of this offer. We will be very happy to give you one — matter of fact — we would even thank you for taking this opportunity.

Amateur Show

Farmington entrants in the contest include 17 students from the Helene Hutton dancing school, and Wynona Barnes, vocalist of 21001 Oxford Road. They will vie for prizes with entrants from Detroit, Dearborn and Redford.

More contestants will be welcomed at the show, according to Eldridge. They can get more details on participation by calling him at KE 2-5551.

The Farmington show will start a gradual elimination contest among enthusiastic amateurs. A contest September 4, among winners of the August shows, will determine members of a group who will make a tour with Eldridge in October.

Now Finding More Fin-Clipped Trout

Lake Michigan fin-clipped lake trout, released in 1944 - 45 - 46 in the Fox Islands area, are turning up in commercial fishermen's nets in slightly greater numbers, the conservation department reports.

The department's fish division pays a $2 reward for each fin-clipped trout already has dish out 274 rewards in less than six months as compared to 266 the entire 12 months of last year. In the first year, 1947, payments were made on 73 lake trout.

The plantings were made as part of the program to determine the worth of artificial propagation and planting in the Great Lakes.

In the three years, a total of 3,277,402 lake trout fingerlings were released, 125 per cent of which were fin-clipped. Marked fingerlings also were planted in Lake Huron in 1947-48 and may show up in the next few years. Lake trout, believed to be victims of the sea lamprey, failed to show up in fishermen's catches on Lake Huron in April. Only 59 pounds were taken in May.

The experiment is a cooperative investigation by governmental fish agencies of all states and Canadian provinces bordering the Great Lakes and the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service. Objectives include finding out how soon planted fingerlings begin to appear in the nets, how many years they continue to be taken, and information on growth rate of lake trout.

Costly Loss Comes From Milk Fever

Well-fed cows usually suffer least from disease — but in the case of milk fever, it's different. Glen Reed, extension veterinarian at Michigan State College, says this disease most often strikes the best milkers and best fed cows in the herd.

Another bad feature of milk fever is that most cows who get the disease have it between the third and seventh calving — the best period of the cow's life.

Milk fever is accompanied by a low level of calcium in the blood, however the actual cause is unknown. It usually shows up with in two days of calving. As the cow starts producing heavily, she draws a lot of calcium from the blood.

A cow coming down with milk fever will stop eating and become listless and slow moving. She gets weak and has trouble standing. A coma sometimes follows. Death will follow in a few hours or a few days unless the cow is treated.

A calcium salt, injected into the veins, will usually cause the cow to get well in a hurry. Sometimes several treatments will be needed. Reed states. Some cases are different.

Recently an area test of all cattle of Oseola County was completed, reports Dr. C. F. Clark, State Veterinarian, Michigan Department of Agriculture. This test work on 1,272 cattle in 1296 herds indicates that the amount of Bang's infection is the lowest ever observed in this county; infection was found in 33 herds or 4.09% of those tested; and 130 cattle (.63%).

Since the infection found is less than 5 per cent of the herds and 1 per cent of the cattle, Oseola County should qualify as an accredited county, according to Dr. Clark.

Quack grass can be killed with a water soluble chemical or by using a deeper point spring tooth field cultivator. Drag all the quack grass roots to the top where the sun can kill and kill them. Getting all the roots to the top requires many thorough workings of the field. Work it every few days all summer long and then again a few times next spring. Then put in a cultivated crop of corn and beans.

For chemical control, TCA is the best chemical that is available for control of quack grass. It is water soluble and is easily applied with any kind of sprayer. One pound of a 60 per cent TCA in 1 gallon of water is enough to cover an area 25 by 25 feet.

TCA should not be used where any vegetable or other crop is growing.

As far as is now known, TCA is injurious to most actively growing plants. If infested land is cropped this season, TCA may be applied in the fall.

Combine Wheat at the Proper Time

When it is harvest time for your wheat, one of the most important things to remember is to be sure that the moisture content is down to 14% or less before combining. This means about a week or so after the "hard dough stage" which is time to cut when using a binder.

The dry salt test is an inexpensive home method for testing moisture content. Take a waxed cardboard carton such as an ice cream carton; 1/2 pint size or smaller is suitable. Thresh out enough grain to half fill the container. Place the grain in the container and add 1/2 teaspoon of dry table salt. Cover the container and shake for a couple of minutes. Empty the grain and salt onto a smooth, dry surface. If the salt particles are separate, the grain is near the right moisture content for storing. If the salt particles are clumped together, there is still too much moisture in the grain for safe storage. As a final check take a sample of the threshed grain direct to your local elevator for a moisture test. If they tell you it contains too much moisture, don't combine.

Cool grains keep better in storage than warm grains. Grain exposed to the hot sun after threshing becomes very warm in a short time. After grain is bagged and the bags left lying in the sun, the grain will become very warm and may absorb moisture from the damp soil. If the grain is stored in a home granary, keep the doors open if necessary for two weeks to provide good ventilation.

Unfit plants often grow slowly and many develop abnormally in much the same manner as animals when they are not fed a balanced ration. Nutrient deficiencies may result in off color leaves, abnormally shaped leaves or stems and sometimes the plants may die. Crops growing on a soil low in nitrogen usually have a very light green color and the leaves will gradually turn yellow. The "firing" of corn is a symptom of nitrogen starvation. Phosphorus starvation in corn is indicated by a reddish purple edge on the corn leaf, while potassium starvation causes the corn leaf to turn yellow at the tip and more down the edges of the leaf.

Alfalfa growing on a soil deficient in potassium will have yellow edged leaves with white streaks scattered through the yellow area. Phosphorus starvation causes alfalfa plants to grow very slowly. Through the use of the "green tissue" test, we can confirm our suspicions that we saw in the growing plant.

Now is a good time to look for these hunger signs so that you may prepare to take measures to remedy them. Anyone using a green tissue test call or bring the plant into the Extension Service Office, 1 Lafayette Street, Pontiac, Michigan.

Man Arrested On Charge Of Molesting Girl, 17

George R. Alkey, of 18292 Deering, was arrested Monday night and lodged in the Oakland County Jail at Pontiac by Farmington police officers.

According to the Farmington Police Chief Joseph G. DeVriendt, Alkey was apprehended for allegedly molesting a 17-year-old girl. Police said Alkey drove by the girl on Brookdale Avenue and asked if he could drive her home. Upon her refusal, Alkey then left the car, walked toward the girl, and offered to walk home with her, police said. At this point, the girl started screaming, and attracted the attention of the resident in the Grand River-Brookdale area to the scene, Chief DeVriendt stated.

Alkey, married and the father of four children, was arraigned before Justice John J. Schulte Tuesday morning. He was released on $500 bail after pleading not guilty. Trial has been set for August 19.
