The bridal veil, fingertip length and edged in lace, was held in place by a bugle-headed tithra. White roses and baby pom-pom mums were tied with a wide satin ribbon to make a bridal bouquet.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Clifford St. Arno, a close friend of the bride, was gown in aqua marquisette, with matching headress. She carried a basket of tallman roses. The bridesmaids carried old long arm baskets having bows that matched the color of their marquisette dresses. Miss Edith Stone,
