NOBLE P. T. A. READY FOR FALL FESTIVAL

Cartoon movies for the kids will be in order November 12 when the Noble P. T. A. presents its Fall Festival. A 35 minute sound cartoon will be run continuously to keep the smaller tots happy.

The Fall Festival will commence at 2:00 p.m. and run until the hour guest has left, according to the group's spokesmen. One of the highlights of the festival will be a gigantic bake sale — more than 75 contributors have been arranged to supply the sale with baked goods.

Donations for a cedar chest being filled by the group are wanted by Mrs. Leslie McLane. She stated that linens are preferred.

Mrs. Victor LaPrese and Mrs. Chester Herndon will keep the crowd from starving with the baked goods and home-canned foods. Mrs. Wray Leige and Mrs. Gordon Horvella will vend fresh flowers to replace frost-killed home grown flowers. Mrs. Sam Turner will have charge of the shooting gallery.

A rummage counter, run by Mrs. Charles Murphy, will give bargain-seekers a thrill. And Mrs. Shirley Hawkins' pottoliers will save sinned fingers. Mrs. Santo will vend cards and wrappings.

For a hot and cold booth will satisfy a sweet tooth, and Mrs. Edmund Hart's lunch tables will be a restful place to ease the feet during a long stay at the festival.

Mrs. Lester McLane is ticket chairman for the affair, and Mrs. Doris Barge is donating a hand woven tufted rug.

Next meeting of the Noble P.T.A. will be held November 7 at 8 p.m. At this meeting, Mrs. Boston will direct the three great mothers in serving lunch. A travelog will be presented by Mr. Leo O'Camb, of Detroit.

Know Your Farmington Merchant... Shoe Business? "Swell," He Says

Strangely enough, the woman who must try on every shoe in the store before deciding to purchase the first she saw, and the salesman who just knows her size nine feet will fit into a size four shoe, don't bother Arthur Hocking.

He's been waiting on them for nine years now, and he's long enough to know their habits and desires, he says.

Mr. Hocking started with the Hockings - Gillies (he's a Hocking) in 1940. He worked at different stores in the chain until the store in Farmington was started, a little more than a year ago.

Although the store hasn't been here long, Arthur Hocking has. He has lived in the Farmington area for 20 years, and now resides at 19710 Middlebelt Road.

Mr. Hocking originally hails from Calumet, Michigan. The Hockings (she is the former Lillian Grose, from Calumet) have four children. They were married in 1926. The only son still alive, Arthur, Jr., is a student at Wayne University.

Before getting into the shoe business, Mr. Hocking attended the Calumet schools, the Detroit Business Institute, and was employed by the City Gas office and then did electrical work for 20 years.

Mr. Hocking thinks his business is "just swell." "You're accomplishing something worthwhile," he says. "It's a good deal — giving someone a good pair of shoes for a fair price."

He likes the youngsters, too;

seeing them come back for shoes and watching them grow between pairs is something he enjoys.

But not everyone can get into the shoe business, he says. "It takes a lot of backing — $30,000 or so," he says. His retail standpoint out that just two sections of his shelves bear $1,000 in merchandise.

"But it's a swell business," he said. "We can satisfy just about any desire for shoes we get."
