REP. GEORGE A. DONDERO
It is impossible for every single American citizen to pass personally upon every single item of often highly technical legislation now handled by the Congress. If this were attempted, government soon would cease to be Democratic and become Monarchical, owing to lack on the part of most citizens of the special knowledge and skill gained by members of Congress in the course of their duties. Furthermore, the very unyieldingness of the Democratic machinery of government would make it impossible to protect the rights of minorities. Under the Republican representative system at present, minority members of Congress are able, by argument and persuasion, to restrain the majority from committing excesses which would work injustices upon the minorities. Under the present representative system, it is even possible for minority representatives, facing a common danger to their constituents, to combine and defeat the majority which otherwise might destroy one or another of the people's essential freedoms.

The fact that our nation is a Republic, and that Republicans continue to stand firm for representative government, is the chief reason why there always is hope for America. So long as the minority, of whatever political party in Congress, has the right to check on the majority and thus to bring out into the open any proposals that constitute a threat to freedom and justice, just so long will Americans continue to enjoy that freedom and justice in furtherance of which the Republic was formed.

Small Job Improves Barn Water System

A farmer recently installed drinking cups in his dairy barn and found an annoying pounding at times - usually just as a cow would stop drinking. He wondered what could be done to eliminate the noise. A. J. Bell, Michigan State College agricultural engineer, believes the advice he gave this farmer might be of interest to others. The pounding comes from the surge of water in the pipe. When a tap is closed or a cow quits drinking, the water pressure causes the pounding. It can be overcome by placing an air dome near the end of the line. The air dome need be only a piece of 2 or 2 1/2 inch pipe about 24 inches long mounted on a tee. The pipe has air in it and cushions the surge of water, thereby eliminating the noise.
