Living History

Sponsored by THOMPSON-BROWN

The name "Livonia" originated as a former province of Russia, comprising present Estonia and parts of Latvia. This region was also known as "Livonia" after the Livs, a Finnic tribe which inhabited the Baltic Coast when, in the 12th century, it was conquered by a German military religious order known as the Livonian Knights. The inclusion of European Livonia among those countries behind the Iron Curtain has removed, except as to name, practically all resemblance between that area and this freedom-loving, young American City which is Livonia, Michigan.
