START FACELIFTING STATE PARKS FOR SPRING RUSH

Facelift program at Michigan's 60 state parks and recreation areas, well past the halfway mark, is being accelerated as an insurance against an early park season, the conservation department reports.

Weathermen advanced the picketing timetable last year, catching some parks only partially prepared for early visitors. Numbers of southern Michigan parks attracted crowds as early as late April.

Park rangers are busy housecleaning, painting old picnic tables, constructing new ones, trimming trees and underbrush and grading park roads. Footbridges are being repaired and new park signs are being erected.

Besides these operations which are normal part of the dressing-up program each year, some locations will have other changes.

Campers will have improved electrical service at Bloomer One, Burt Lake, East Tawas, Interloch and "Mitsch" Onaway, Wilson, Young and Waterloo parks. Campers' registration booths will be added at Hoelt and Grand Haven. A new group camp will be available at Warren Dunes and the one at Highland has been rebuilt.

Overhauling of regular campgrounds is scheduled at Brimley, Indian Lake, Young and Hayes. Black topping of entrance roads will be completed at Fort Wilkins, Higgins Lake and Dodge Four. Others will be scheduled if budget permits.

Building improvements are on the docket at Onaway, Gogebic Lake, Brimley and Highland. The last named area will have new beach and bathhouse while the Brighton beach will be resanded.

Major items in southeastern Michigan recreation areas will be a tree planting program. Parks division plans to set out future shade trees in Pinckney, Brighton, Island Lake, Highland, Froid Lake, Pontiac Lake and possibly Bald Mountain and Ortoaville.

Public water supply will be improved at Indian Lake, Onaway, Osageo Lake, Palms Book, Straits and Ludington parks.

The 60 state parks and recreation areas pulled a record 13,107, 032 visitors in 1949.

Earliest Garden Harvest Green Onions In 3 Weeks

Soil Largest Onion Sets Deeply to Produce Green Onions. Three Weeks After You Plant Them the Harvest Can Begin

First harvest which an amateur gardener can reap from spring sowing is a mess of green onions, and how good they taste! Three weeks after onion sets are planted you can pull up green onions and serve them with the dinner salad.

Sets, you understand, not seed. It would take two months to grow even tiny green onion stalks from seed. Onion sets are an artificial product which men learned about from nature. The first onion set appeared at the top of the seed stalk, where instead of a ball filled with seed, nature presented the gardener with a bundle of tiny onion bulbs, which he came to call sets.

Only a few varieties of onions produce these top sets, but when gardeners saw how much faster they developed than the seed, some inventive genius of the cave man era (onions are that ancient) had the happy thought of using small, half-starved onions instead of top sets to sow. It worked! The small, half-starved onion had a second chance to make the grade, and the speed with which it produced a large onion told the experimenter he had stumbled on a good thing.

To produce these artificial sets, known as bottom sets, onion seed is sown thickly, and the plants are not thinned out, so they are too crowded to develop normally. When the small bulbs mature they are dried and stored over winter to be planted again in the spring.

From 15 to 20 pounds of large onions can be grown from a pound of onion sets which do not average over three-quarters of an inch in diameter. To grow large onions, a year are possible.

SUMMER COUNSELS AVAILABLE AT U-M FOR NEW FRESHMEN

Students who expect to enroll as freshmen at the University of Michigan this fall may take advantage of a summer counseling service which will be in effect for the first time this year.

Undergraduate units in the University will have faculty members available from Commencement Day, June 17, until the opening of Orientation Week on September 18, to consult with entering freshmen about courses to take or other problems of an academic nature. Provost James P. Adams has announced.

A pre-registration conference with an academic counselor is a part of the orientation procedure for every freshman during the week preceding the opening of classes. Since this is a period of considerable activity, University officials have felt that many students would like to have more time to consider their academic programs with the help of a faculty adviser.

The prospective freshmen should write to the dean of the college they plan to enroll in to get further information about the summer counseling plan.

Unemployable Workers Flooding Alaska

The plea "River Stay Away from my Door" has a modern counterpart in Alaska, Harry C. Markle, Executive Director of the Michigan Unemployment Compensation Commission, says.

An army of laborers and workers of almost every classification are practically flooding Alaska now, days, only to find that there is no work for them.

Unauthorized advertisements for help has lured thousands of workers to the northern territory, often at great sacrifice and expense, only to find that there is no work, and frequently no accommodations for them.

MSC Enrollment Drops Slightly

Spring enrollment at Michigan State College failed to set a new term registration record for the first time since the post-war surge back to the campus began in 1945.

Registrar Robert S. Linton stated an enrollment figure of 14,378, which may be padded slightly by late registrations. He said the final total would not reach the 14,619 registered a year ago.

Veteran enrollment dropped to 38 per cent of the student body, Linton said. Slightly more than 5,300 veterans were expected to be in classes until June.

Linton attributed the decline to graduation of more than 600 students at the close of winter term March 21, nearly 300 more than in the 1949 winter term.
