Survey Shows Egg Buyers' Attitudes

What Michigan consumers think about the eggs they buy was revealed in recent findings by H. E. Lavers and W. A. Nichols, Michigan State College agricultural economists. Twenty per cent of the purchasers in the survey had complaints.

The eggs reported on had an average lapse time from packing to consumer sale of about seven days, but ranged from one to 34 days. Most of the customers made egg purchases weekly.

DUTCH ELM DISEASE DEFEATED BY THREE SPRAYS YEARLY

Three sprays a year, the first of 12% DDT, the second and third 6% DDT, are effective in preventing Dutch Elm disease, a tree ailment that kills elm trees within a year after infection, Gerald Clark, local state surgeon, said last week. He said that the disease, which has been found within 30 miles of Farmington, comes from a virus carried by the Elm Bark Beetle, a small bug about 1/4 inch long, black with reddish stripes.

SUNSHINE LADY TELLS STORY OF THE SHOELESS BOY

Dennis Martin, age 11, had his heart set on a bright new pair of shoes in which to start school. It's true his other classmates would perhaps be wearing a complete new outfit. But Dennis has lots of patience, so that new shirt and gay tie could wait. But the shoes would be his pride. Hadn't he worked long hours while other kids played, to earn the seven dollars tucked away in his billfold?
