Mobile unit grades apples in the orchard, boosts profits

Field tests have shown that mobile orchard graders increase the net income from apple crops, especially where fruit is stored orchard run or marketed in unfaced crates. Michigan State operation with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, tested a grader that weighed about 450 pounds and was powered by a 1-hp. gasoline motor. With it, 6 or 7 pickers and a sorting crew of 4 picked and sorted 7,852 bushels of apples in 15½ hours. Results of using the mobile grader were: less handling and bruising, no unnecessary handling of undergrade fruit, increased picker output, less packing-house space needed and longer storage life of apples. Rural telephone service steadily improves

In 1951 Michigan Bell added 9,000 more telephones in rural areas. It made service better for 4,000 others with new equipment that put fewer parties on their line or gave them better ringing. Nearly three of every four establishments in Michigan Bell rural territory have telephones now; most are on lines with eight telephones or less. Money from people who invest their savings in the telephone business. Naturally they expect the business to earn a fair profit, to pay them a fair return for the use of their money.
