Horse Thief Steals Child's Palomino and Bridle

All of the horse thieves aren't out west! That's what Mr. Mrs. Richard Lanecaster of 35353 Nine Mile Road discovered when the palomino horse which his 13 year old daughter Alice rides was stolen from the pasture Thursday morning.

After the horse and bridle were discovered missing, the Lanecasters contacted law enforcement officials and ran an ad in a Detroit newspaper.

Like moose, elk are not fitted to thrive in the presence of civilization, and seem fated to disappear except in remote regions or under special legal protection.

Discover First Ruffed Grouse Brood This Spring

South Lyon and identified the brose, whose bridle is still missing. He had been ridden hard and had not been fed or watered. They took him to a farm where he is now recuperating from his mistreatment.

Conservation field men observed a brood of seven near McMillan and a covey of at least three birds north of Baldwin.

"This means the hens must have started laying about March 20, or at a time when a minimum of six inches of snow still covered most of Luce County," notes G. A. Ammann, state grouse specialist.

ROLLING DOWN THE RIVER By Bob Kettler

By Bob Kettler

We've been reading the papers of late, and have come to the conclusion that the news isn't any too good, what with Korea, politics and more strikes on the front page than you'll find in even a Tigers' baseball game.

Sometimes we think that's what happens to you when you get around to asking you to bring the car in for the spring tune-up it needs. Especially now that the weather is getting around to the warm side and no one can get either kids or motorists in the house in time for dinner.

Maybe the meanest man we know is the fellow who recently had a wall telephone installed. That way, he tells us, he knows he'll get a chance at the thing when his wife's feet get tired.

That's that, but a fellow tells us that many a girl has a tough time deciding whether she wants to show distinction or distinctly in her new summer outfit.
