A FINAL WORD

The 1951-52 Journalism class ends its high school journalistic endeavors with this issue. During this school year they set writing and sales records and held the first Journalism class.

During the year the staff members wrote and sent to The Enterprise a total of 612 stories, a number which exceeds all previous records.

These stories could not have been assigned, written, edited and typed without the able assistance of the assistant editors, N. Hamlin, J. DeNies and J. Pannini. The other staff members contributed immeasurably toward the publication work.

Another record was also surpassed. Approximately 2600 copies of The Enterprise were sold in the high school. George Williams, chief salesman, made the greatest contribution to the sales program.

On February 29 the Journalism class presented the first Journalism dance. The proceeds were used, along with a contribution of the yearbook staff, to buy a book type writer. This dance would not have been a success without the efforts of the general chairman, Arline Aho.

Of course we could not have published one edition without the help of our advisor, Lee S. Peel. Each week he suffered through the reporters' assignments without complaint.

The co-operation of our readers, The Enterprise staff and the administration was also appreciated. We hope that we have served well. The best school is an informed school. E. M.

A DEEP INTEREST

During the past two years the Farmington Exchange Club has gone to great expense to show high school students the importance of the members of the club have in them.

As the 1951-52 school year progressed the Exchanges invited 66 seniors to participate in their Year-End Banquet. The boys took part in the club luncheon and meeting. At the end of the year the young Exchanges were given Junior Exchange pins.

We have sincerely appreciated the efforts of the Exchange Club to acquaint us with the activities of the local, state and national organization. We also appreciate being allowed to meet the members of the club who form the "backbone" of the community.

Efforts such as those of the Farmington Exchange Club, serve to show youth that their elders have a deep interest in them.

The Girls' Athletic Association made letter awards at the Athletic Awards assembly May 28.

Mrs. Timmons, GAA advisor, made the presentations.

Twenty-one girls, including three freshmen, won letters which signify that a girl has participated in at least three sports in which 500 points must be earned. Points are also given for outside activities such as swimming, hiking and horseback riding.

The 21 girls are: N. Harly, A. Aho, P. McCracken, L. Dowling, J. DeNies, S. Wilkinson, S. Bates, A. Clappison, S. Wallace, M. Go-Leopard, C. Aho, L. Gildemeister, C. Chapp, P. Cox, L. Scott and the three freshmen, S. Gatzley, C. Costello and B. Woodcock.

A trophy is awarded to any girl who earns 1500 points or over. This year no one made the required number, although some of the girls were close.

Next year's officers were announced as follows: Joanne Turner, president; Dorothy Cant, vice-president; Barbara Walters, secretary; Sally Leonard, treasurer; Carl Aho, sports manager; Erna Day, minor sports manager. N. R.

Rita Peron and a classmate, Shirley Lowe, from the University of Michigan, spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Peron on Orchard Street. Shirley Lowe's home is in South Carolina.
