SUBSTITUTE MILK BY MSC EXPERT

BY MSC EXPERT

Many Michigan farmers have been asking questions about the new idea of using synthetic sow's mik iter pigs. Dr. J. A. Hoefer, Michigan State College swine nutrition authority, has some pointers on the subject.

Hoefer point of business. But there are some cases where farmers can profitably use synthetic sow's milk. Pig hatchery operators, the profitably use synthetic sow's milk. Pig hatchery operators probably will be better able to use the new system.

The MSC swine untritionist advises against putting the whole nto the management system needanto the management system needed.

Pigs still need to 'nurse for a minimum of two or three days to get the essential colostrum milk. A highly-fortified synthetic milk is needed for best results. Pigs are easily taught to drink. If their noses are dipped in the warm milk once or twice they learn to drink it.

Among other polaters for successful using synthetic milk is nough to keep pigs from chiling. Heat lamps have been successfully used. Room temperature should be about 55 to 72 degrees for the first four weeks, then gradually decreased.

The, synthetic milk should be self-fed. Full-feed milk for the first them weeks, then gradually decreased.

self-fed. Full-feed milk for the first three weeks, then gradually decrease and remove entirely at the out of five weeks of age. Pigs should be started early on a highly fortified, palatable pig starter. And water should be provided in an automatic fount, Hoefer says.
