

Tuberculosis Society Can Use Volunteer Workers

The Tuberculosis and Health Society is already thinking about the Christmas season and looking forward to the 45th annual sale of double-barred cross Christmas Seals.

To help with the mailing of its thousands of letters which will go to families in Wayne County, Richard L. Lea, executive secretary of the Society, is calling on men and women to volunteer in the preparation of the mail. The work of the TB and Health Society is financed by the sale of the double-barred cross Christmas Seals.

"Tuberculosis is a disease that we can do something definite about. We know what causes it, how it spreads and what to do about curing it. We can stop it before it starts." Lea stated.

"Through continued efforts in TB control we are yearly lowering the death rate from the disease but it is still our most extensive public health problem. Through early case-finding we can ferret out the disease while it is in its early stages and thus prevent its spread."

"Through health education we can teach people the value of proper health habits and the value of having a chest x-ray once a year," the executive said.

The TB and Health Society at 153 East Elizabeth, Detroit, urges everyone to aid in this crusade.

Agricultural economists at Michigan State College are singing on a sour note when it comes to food costs. They say food costs are high, but they may go higher. But you don't have to sing the blues with them if you buy wisely.

And a note of hope comes when the economists predict that meat prices in 1953 will probably be about the same as this year. The U. S. Department of Agriculture reports meat production is on the increase with slightly more beef than pork recorded.

Canned fruits and vegetables are likely to stay about the same in price, too. The pick this summer and fall was slightly lower than last year, but carry-over stocks will keep prices on an even keel.

The MSC economists predict advancing prices for canned and frozen fruit juices, however. Supplies are low, they say.
