

EMPLOYMENT OFFICE BEATS THE BUSHES
AS JOBS OUTNUMBER APPLICANTS IN AREA

For the first time since the era of war-peak production, the Michigan Employment Security Commission is beating the bushes to find workers to fill jobs.

Thousands of jobs with no workers to fill them are listed in the books of the M. E. S. C., according to Theodore Luke, Manager of the Northwest branch at 13501 Schaefer. Failure of workers to call at the commission offices is indicative of a shortage of manpower which is becoming more and more severe daily, Mr. Luke said.

Employment in the state and in the City of Detroit is at an all-time high, with 2,500,000 at work in the state and 1,415,000 in the Detroit area, he said. This is caused by the imposition of a new, enlarged defense program upon an already climbing civilian economy, he added. As a result, there are more jobs available than workers to fill them.

This is in marked contrast to the circumstances of a year ago when unemployment soared to approximately 170,000 in the state and 115,000 in Detroit.

"We feel," Luke declared, "that there are many unemployed men in the area who have skills which are needed, and which may well be put to use. Of course, many of the job openings are in highly skilled and professional categories, and in the skilled, clerical and stenographic trades."

"There are, however, many jobs open as break-ins in factory work, to which most young men and many older men are attracted."

"One of the most insistent shortages, right this moment, lies in the clerical and sales field. Thousands of trained, experienced women could be placed in retail sales work in Detroit almost overnight," he said.

Reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national mobilization can prevail in exclusion of religious principle.

The oat harvest is a true certified seed which will be marketed in the spring for about $1.10 per bushel. It was grown by their parent, Donald Dunn, who won the farm last May in a national V.F.W. contest. Valued at nearly $75,000, the farm was donated, planted, and the house built in one day through the help of Moss Lake merchants and contractors.

LEGION AUXILIARY TO PLAY SANTA FOR VETERANS

More than 30,000 members of the Michigan American Legion Auxiliary this week are bringing a Christmas shopping service to 3,500 hospitalized veterans who are unable to go to stores to do their gift hunting for relatives and friends back home.

Repeating service started six years ago, the auxiliary members have set up a shopping center in each of four Veterans Administration hospitals located at Dearborn, Saginaw, Fort Custer and Iron Mountain.

The unique difference between these shopping centers and other stores where Christmas gifts are selected is that veterans don't pay for the gifts they select for members of their families. What they choose is the gift of the auxiliaries. Each veteran is entitled to select gifts, with a value of $15.00 to $30.00. After the selections are made, volunteer auxiliary members assigned to each hospital wrap them as gifts and then prepare each package for parcel post.

Hospital orderlies and nurses bring veterans bound to wheel chairs and stretchers to the shopping centers.

Under the direction of Mrs. Delmar Landon, department rehabilitation chairman, 3993 Bedford, Detroit, and state auxiliary president, Mrs. Jack Collins of New Haven, the shopping centers this year have received gifts from 450 auxiliary units throughout the state which has exceeded a total cost of $24,000. Many units began their shopping as early as September to insure delivery of gifts for the December 1 opening of the centers. The stores will wind up operation December 12.

"Drunk drivers go to jail."

That train will be the theme of the State Safety Commission's December traffic safety campaign announced by State Police Commissioner Joseph A. Childs.

Spoken on behalf of the commission, of which he is a member, Childs said that while "drunk drivers go to jail at any other time of the year, too, special emphasis is placed upon the offense right now because in the exuberance of the season there is more than the usual tendency to mix drinking and driving. The result often has been to turn the occasion of Christmas and the New Year into a tragedy."

The wise driver, Childs said, is careful of the safety of others as well as himself, will "make it a strict rule not to get behind the wheel of a car if he has had anything to drink."

Further results of questioning showed that children dislike having the dentist try to be funny or to act silly. They highly approve of the educational value of getting instruction in the care of the teeth, and they enjoy being complimented and receiving some little souvenir of the visit, irrespective of their behavior.

This desire to keep the teeth that are taken out is deeply engrained, and a few dentists interested in research and record keeping have found it desirable to use counter motivation by purchasing the extracted tooth, Dean Olson stated.

Youths Judge
Dentist's Behavior

Children in the dentist chair have definite ideas on how they like the dentist to behave, according to Dean Willard C. Olson of the University of Michigan School of Education.

The educator made a systematic investigation of the dentist-child relationship by holding a round table conference with a group of 11 year old children in sixth grade of the University Elementary School, all of whom had had dental experience.

Results indicated that youngsters welcome recognition by their first names and highly approve of having magazines, books, papers, pencils and things to play with in the waiting room.

They don't like the dentist to ask routine questions just to make an investigation. One of the highly favored items in the entire list is a desire to have the dentist explain how and what he is going to do. Using a mirror so youngsters can watch the work was recommended. The children said they like to be told about the instruments and their uses, but they do not wish to see the dentist's tools out in front of him all at once.

They are quite willing to be informed, "This may hurt" when it's going to, but dislike being told, "It won't hurt" when it's going to, it was found. They like to have a signal to be used when an operation begins to hurt so they can tell the dentist to stop.

They object strenuously to having the operator start at them while working. The Dean points out that some dentists avoid this by working from behind as much as practicable. They also very definitely don't like being scolded or having anyone make fun of them. They don't wish to be compared with other children or have derogatory remarks made to their parents.

Further results of questioning showed that children dislike having the dentist try to be funny or to act silly. They highly approve of the educational value of getting instruction in the care of the teeth, and they enjoy being complimented and receiving some little souvenir of the visit, irrespective of their behavior.

This desire to keep the teeth that are taken out is deeply engrained, and a few dentists interested in research and record keeping have found it desirable to use counter motivation by purchasing the extracted tooth, Dean Olson stated.
