CLAY SOIL NEEDS BREAKING DOWN FOR GOOD LAWN

Is heavy clay posing a lawn-making problem for you?

Clay soil is not infertile, but it is so stiff that it slows down root penetration and cracks and dries out rapidly in dry weather.

To break up clay, about two or three times as much sand as clay is needed. If the lawn is to be of blue grass, the clay can be broken up with sifted coal ashes. However, other grasses do not like the lime in that mixture. Most grasses will prefer slightly avid or neutral soils.

Best results are obtained in Michigan by bringing in black swamp muck, which is the decomposed or carbonized surface of peat bogs. This carbonized muck has a remarkable effect upon clays.

When the clay is dry and broken into a powder, lay about two inches of black muck over it and harrow to a depth of four inches into the clay. The muck will expand the clay to make about seven inches of top soil. This mixture, if coupled with a reasonable amount of chemical fertilizer, will assure an unusually fine, velvety lawn. It may not be necessary to lay a one-inch loamy seed bed, but it is usually advisable to do so.

Warning: Never use black swamp muck as a seed bed on top soil by itself, because it will dry up and blow into the house.

In all lawns under preparation, rake out and throw away all chunks of clay and other debris before the seed bed is laid.

Best chemical fertilizer to use is probably 10-6-4, or ten parts nitrate, six parts phosphate and four parts potash. Quantity to be used varies in accordance with the richness of the soil. One to two pounds of chemical fertilizer for every 100 square feet should be enough for a start.

MICHIGAN OIL POOLS

The first oil pool of any importance in Michigan was located near Port Huron about 1886. The next commercial pools were discovered in the vicinity of Saginaw in 1925 and in Muskegon in 1927. Other discoveries followed rapidly and at present oil is produced in at least 39 counties of the southern peninsula.
