Trout Season End In Sight

The general trout season ends September 15, the conservation department notes, at which time brook and brown trout angling ends for the year.

However, trout fishermen will still be able to take advantage of the special rainbow season after that date.

Most of the state's waters directly connected with the Great Lakes will be open until November 30 in the extended fall season.

The list of water to remain open includes a large number of lakes and all the major streams. Waters in 56 of the state's 83 counties will be open to the late rainbow fishermen.

A list of waters open during the season may be obtained from the department's fish division in Lansing.

Also, conservation officers can advise anglers locally.

Seest thou a man diligent in his business? He shall stand before kings.

NO ARGUMENT FROM HER—French starlet Simone Bache is staying out of the controversy over shorter skirt lengths for the time being. She's satisfied with a bathing suit and the beach at Juan Les Pins, France.

Pheasant Season Outlook Bright; Seen As Good Or Better Than '52

Hunters should take as many or more pheasants from southern lower peninsula fields this year as they did last year, the conservation department notes.

More than 585 rural mail carriers, participating in the department's eighth annual midsummer census of pheasants, counted a whopping 32 per cent more broods than last year.

The counts were made while the carriers drove rural mail routes from July 27 to August 8 in 33 counties of the southern lower peninsula. A total of nearly 5,000 broods were seen.

In size, these broods averaged about six birds each, little different from previous years. Sixty-eight per cent of the broods were seen with broods, about the same as in 1952.

Birds seen in 30 per cent of the broods were one-half to three-fourths grown, higher than the 25 per cent counted in that age group last year. This bears out spring reports that nesting was somewhat earlier this year.

The population increase showed up generally throughout the pheasant range.

The Thumb counties again showed the highest population, registering a 36 per cent increase over the 1952 count.

The Ottawa-Allegan County area was second again this year, though only moderate increase showed up.

The southeastern counties, which showed a slight increase, placed third, while the central counties of the southern lower peninsula placed fourth in total population with a 30 per cent increase in broods counted.

The poorest area was, as in past years, the southwestern counties, though a good increase was seen there. The number of broods counted there.

Working as volunteers, the mail carriers provide department game workers with the best available survey of pheasant reproduction. Through the years, the accuracy of their counts has been reflected by post-season kill figures, which have closely correlated with population indications gained from the censuses.

WOODLOT HARVEST CAN PAY PROFIT, SAYS FORESTER

Do you have a woodlot on your farm?

If you have and can spend two to four hours per acre in it this winter, you may get returns ranging from $2.75 to $9.50 from that much land. That's the word from Lester E. Bell, extension forester at Michigan State College.

He suggests harvesting timber products and marketing them in the form of sawlogs, pulpwood, firewood and other forest products. But, he advises, you should make sure there is a local timber operator or another buyer in the vicinity before beginning work. And negotiate in advance on both price and how the timber is to be measured.

Home economists at Michigan State College report that potato salad doesn't freeze satisfactorily. The potatoes become mushy when frozen - and the salad dressing separates.
