Report Odd Bird In Iron County

Neal Edwards of Niles recently reported seeing a chukur partitige while on a bear hunt in northern Iron County in the upper penin-sula.

sula.

Edwards was even able to take pictures of the bird, which was positively identified by conservation department biologists in Lan-tion department biologists in Lansing.

Chukars are native to the near castern uplands — the dry rocky or plains ireas of Asia and Africa. Game men are puzzled by the appearance of any of the birds in Michigan! No state attempts have ever been made to introduce the bird here, and so far as department workers know, the only private attempt at upper peninsula stocking was made about 15 years go when'an individual reared and released a small number of the chicks.

The only other possibility, game men say, is that the bird may have diritted north from a Wisconsin stocking experiment.

In certain arid parts of the American weat, chukars have been introduced successfully and some hunting is now carried on, but game men say Michigan's climate and terrain is generally not suit-ed to production of the birds.
