Distributing Costs

Higher taxes, license fees and container costs more than, offset the lower farm price of milk actording to Leonard N. Franck-axecultive secretary of the Michigan Milk Dealers Association.

Basing his report on a study-of milk distribution costs by Indiana University, Francke said the arrage decline in farm milk prices of nearly three cents per sales dolar was offset by rising costs fo such an extent that the average profit of milk companies per dollar of net sales was one and only the companies of the contract of the con ng day a week.
