The Rev. Carl Kaitreider, innovative pastor of Antioch Lutheran Church and Farmington community leader, will leave June 12 to pioneer a new kind of ministry for the Lutheran Church in America.

Pastor Kaitreider, leaving Farmington after two years at Antioch, will undertake a community ministry in the brand-new planned city of Rotunda West, Fla., 36 miles south of Sarasota.

"It's an exciting move but at this moment not really a happy one," the clergyman said after announcing his plans to his congregation.

"Farmington has been a wonderful place to live," Pastor Kaitreider departs as he completes a two-year term as president of the Farmington Clergy Fellowship.

He has also served on the board of the Farmington Area Advisory Council (Rapline) and on the Farmington YMCA board.

He headed the substance abuse committee that was part of the Family Life Education study later incorporated into the Farmington school district curriculum, and for several years worked with Dr. Edwin Blumberg in a sex education program for junior high school.

Pastor Kaitreider's new ministry will be in an area that now has 2,000 residents and is expected to have upwards of 80,000 when its carefully prepared development is completed.

Sometimes described as the "city of tomorrow," it is being developed by Cayanaugh Land Developers under plans worked out under the auspices of General Electric Corp.

"The city is being built in the round, with business and residential centers in the middle and housing planned so that no one will live more than a mile and a quarter from a school and police and fire station," Rev. Kaitreider said.

"The idea is that, through study and planning, the things that cause crime and blight are virtually eliminated."

Ministry in such a community won't necessarily involve organizing a congregation right away, Pastor Kaitreider said.

"I'll be doing counseling, youth work, probably some community leadership," he said. "Maybe in a year or so there will be an Lutheran congregation forming."

"It's an exciting thing to see the church going into an area like this one that has been strictly company oriented."

"It's the church that will be helping set social standards - maybe moral standards."

His ministry is a first for the Lutheran Church in America, he said, though there are other notable community ministries. Billy Graham's is probably the most famous.

At a visit to Rotunda West before making the decision to accept the new call, Pastor Kaitreider said he was attracted by the LCA's interest in property for a parsonage. However, it won't be ready for some time so he and his family will be in a rented home at first.

Past Kaitreider's resignation was accepted "with deep regret" by the Antioch Church council, which took immediate action to establish a pulp committee to begin choosing a successor.

Before coming to Antioch, Pastor Kaitreider served five years in Dearborn and seven years in Saginaw.

Rev. Lester Kinsolving's New Update

Seven of the nation's more liberal theological schools have joined a campaign to raise $2 million "to formulate plans and programs for meeting a crisis in values."

Harvard, Yale, Vanderbilt, Notre Dame, Chicago, Union Seminary in Manhattan and the Graduate Theological Union in Berkeley, Calif. are asking for the $2 million "to make theological education a more influential force in the moral structure of the nation."

But the conservative and interdenominational magazine Christianity Today asks "What were these schools doing when the crisis in values was developing?"

"They had the chance to provide proper spiritual leadership for the country with their numerous influential graduates, and they blew it."

The fact that "Death of God" advocates are now a graduate of Chicago Divinity School. As a former chancellor of the University of Chicago once put it, "All alumni are dangerous."

But it does make something of a point in noting that "Colin Williams, dean of Yale University Divinity School, has said he considers Buddhism to be as valid as Christianity." And Christianity today could have cited Harvard divinity school's president Kristar Stendahl as well. He has publicly affirmed his lack of belief in anything beyond the grand.

It might also cite the impressive number of scandals and disruptions which have gone on at Berkeley's Graduate Theological Union as a sort of continuing crisis in values.

Here in this, the nation's first theological cooperative (a Protestant and three Catholic seminaries), the board of trustees is headed by an exceptionally aggressive female chairman, Mrs. A. Crawford Greene Jr.

Mrs. Greene has tried to cover up a scorching sex scandal in the GTU's top administration by announcing a $300,000 chair had been sponsored by Nadin Park United Methodist Church in Farmington, invite senior citizens and retirees to join them in meetings at the church beginning at 11:30 a.m. on the first and third Wednesdays of each month.

On the first Wednesday, the members bring a sack lunch.

massive protests from both sides and faculty.

And who trustees of the first of the nine seminaries, the American Baptist Seminary of the West, discussed Berkeley's radical political and theological image in their decision to move out of Berkeley, Mrs. Greene angrily denounced both of San Francisco's daily newspapers for what she termed "gross inaccuracies" in their reporting of this fact.

The current criticism of many liberal seminaries is by no means confined to conservative magazines.

There is the trenchant criticism which appeared in the liberal journal Christian Century, written by former Yale divinity school Prof. Browne Barr, who is now pastor of the First Congregational Church of Berkeley. Writes Dr. Barr:

"Many schools originally established for the training of ministers for local congregations are strongly influenced at all levels by leaders who quite honestly believe that it is a waste of time to try to raise up leaders for the church on the corner."

"It is miraculous if the vocational resolve of men already committed to the ministry survives a year in many of our seminaries."

Many seminaries have become "outstanding centers for the purely intellectual disciplines and for the specialized training of counselors, educators and professional school teachers." These should be left to the universities whose embrace they so eagerly seek... I am sure most churches would not be troubled by the absence of academic credentials, if the minister possessed demonstrable professional competence.

Dr. Barr contends that a "drastic radical reform in education for the parish ministry is long overdue."

Among other things he contends that seminary professors who know next to nothing about the parish church and even refuse to join the seminary community for worship are like Christian Science practitioners placed in key positions in a medical school.

He also pleads for instruction in Bible which is not designed to produce professors of Biblical archaeology, but parish clergy - with instruction by professors who spend their sabbaticals in a local church rather than deep in esoteric study in Switzerland.
