over their shoulder for a Congressional investigator.

"This claim, I can testify, from my own knowledge in visiting most of the key cities in this country during the past year and speaking to a wide variety of groups, is a complete falsehood. It is an attempt to mislead the public. I hope, through this propaganda of theirs, to discourage anybody from taking a position against Communism. As for the other people who pass along the propaganda, the most charitable conclusion I can come to is that they are totally in ignorance of the feeling of the American people."

But when influential people are led to believe and pass along the Communist propaganda it becomes a powerful force in ultimately shaping public opinion. Herbert Philbrick said the Communists are devoting a major effort today to the science of "cybernetics." "Never before," he said, "have we seen such a highly skillfully organized propaganda machine. Cybernetics, according to the Communists, is the manipulation and control of information"—through the press, radio, television, word-of-mouth, all kinds of communications.

"And by this means," said Philbrick, "you can control people as you do puppets. I don't know of a single book on the subject of what the Communists are doing with cybernetics. As a matter of fact my own knowledge is limited to the facts I've gathered from inside the Communist Party. But the Reds have been working at this for many years. And today they are working around the clock in this study of the scientific manipulation and control of information."

Philbrick said that cybernetics, as used by the Communists, is based on the findings of Pavlov, the Russian scientist who developed the theory of conditioned reflexes in animals. The Reds have found, Philbrick said, that "a man, like an animal, who is conditioned to respond to certain impulses, can be made to respond to words, phrases and symbols. Therefore you pour the words, phrases and symbols to which he will respond without thinking. And then you withhold other certain words, which would cause him to respond in a way you may not desire. It is the scientific control of human beings by means of control of information."

In their practice of cybernetics in America the Communists are aided greatly by the fellow-travelers and the Communist front groups. And many loyal non-Communists aid them too, by being victimized by false information cunningly planted by the Red masters of the sciences.

(Next week: Philbrick tells why the American mind is dangerously apathetic toward Communism.)

Mrs. Minnie Dieble, Mrs. Gustie Howe and Mrs. Clarence Trindle, three sisters residing in this locality, were all in Detroit last Saturday afternoon attending funeral services for their grand-nephew Paul Graham. The six year old boy had been killed in an auto accident.
