The most common practice, when reading instruction to the character is to help children, and the common recading the common recognition when they see them. This is called developing a sight voncemorize the letters of the alphabutary. The children do not memorize the letters of the alphabut first, but rather learn the word as a whole, that is, children learn to recognize that some words, such as grandmother, are long and that others, such as run, are short. They also see that some words such as some, such as run, are short. They also see that some words such as look, have a tall letter at the beginning and another at the end.
