Amateur Open Cage Tourney Set For April 3, 4

The Farmington High School gymnasium on Shawnee Road will be the scene of the first rounds of the Ninth Annual Amateur Open Basketball Tournament on April 3 and 4. Represented in the opening rounds will be the finest amateur basketball teams of Michigan, most of them college teams newly graduated and playing together for the first time.

A team from Flint Junior College will be represented, and the Detroit Institute of Technology team will play, sponsored by the Owen Tool Company of Farmington. Other teams which will play in the Farmington rounds are composed of the post-graduate basketballers of the University of Michigan, and the All-College champs of the Highland Park Recreation League.

The Farmington High School gym is thus host to a basketball tournament for the second time in its first year, and not surprisingly, considering the size and excellence of its basketball floor.

The tournament is being sponsored by the Men's Club of Our Lady of Sorrows Parish. Cecil Harris is chairman of the basketball committee.

Improved Field Of F.H.S. Baseball

Farmington's baseball team, which lost all 11 of its games last year, is expected to be greatly improved for the coming season. Young players who gained experience on last year's team should strengthen the team considerably. It is hoped.

The team, lost only four of the starting nine: Fawcett, Shortport, Rice, pitcher, O'Nan, catcher, and Garner, outfielder, were the graduates.

But Jones should continue to be the first baseman as he has in the last two years. Second base has two returning lettermen, Steve Phillips and Louis Gleditsier. Either man is capable of filling the position. Shortport has a fine chance of making first string.

Dave Harrison, with perhaps the best arm on the team, is a capable third baseman, although he has visions of pitching. Catching may turn out to be a problem, though Jerry Flick can come in from the outfield and do a commendable job if no other candidates appear.

Outfield duties will undoubtedly fall on "Leftie" Louis McClellan and Curt Love and "rightie" Roy Temple.

The outfield is fairly well taken care of with all-league center fielder Don Robinson leading the prospects. Bill Landacre, Jerry Flick and George Mullin are other strong outfield prospects.

By one of the greatest of the Globetrotters.

The trio will be augmented by seven other players. They will be named by Saperstein at a later date.

Wilson, who played his college basketball with Tennessee State College, is playing his seventh season with the Trotters. Roy man in the defense, Wilson won most valuable player honors for his outstanding play during the 1955 season.

Johnson is returning to the Trotters after two years of armed service. Johnson, at 6' 6", is a tremendous rebounder and potential star of the greatest of the Globetrotters.

GLOBETROTTERS TO MAKE DETROIT STOP APRIL 15

Abe Saperstein, owner-coach of the Harlem Globetrotters, is busy these days putting together the pieces that made that famed basketball machine go.

Saturday he named the first three players to the Trotter squad that will meet the College All-Americans in the seventh annual World Series of basketball.

Making a one-day stop in Detroit on their coast-to-coast tour, the Globetrotters and All-Americans will play an afternoon-night doubleheader at the Olympia on Sunday, April 15. The first game will start at 2:30 p.m. and 8:30 p.m.

Two veterans, Elmer Robinson and Clarence Wilson, and rookie Andy Johnson have been selected as the nucleus of the Globetrotter squad.

Robinson is the old pro of the Trotters. The former San Diego State College star is now in his tenth season with the team.

Wilson, who played his college basketball with Tennessee State College, is playing his seventh season with the Trotters. Roy man in the defense, Wilson won most valuable player honors for his outstanding play during the 1955 season.

COLORED DUCKS, GESE, WINGING WAY NORTHWARD

If you think you see a pink duck sometimes during the next several weeks, there's no need to rush off to an eye doctor or a psychiatrist - a technicolor waterfowl are actually winging their way north.

Many ducks and geese have been banded and dyed various colors as part of special studies on local movements and migrations of waterfowl. The studies are being conducted by the federal Fish and Wildlife Service and conservation agencies in several states.

Bird watchers in Michigan may detect the marked birds, generally with the aid of binoculars, during spring migration flights which take place from mid-March until May.

Persons who sight any of the specially-colored birds are requested to contact the Conservation Department's game division at Lansing, giving specific information as to color combinations, locations of coloring on the birds and where and when the birds were seen.

The faculty team was composed of Mr. Janni, Mr. Turlo, Mr. Marra, Mr. Ferrin, Mr. Harding, Mr. Carson, Mr. Galati, and Mr. Waters. Players on the senior team were Glen Kelly, Bob Tucker, Tim Pomroy, Pat Benton, Bruce Morene, Bob Barnes, Sam LaBrecque, Joe Bongoro, Gene Garbin, Roger Milarch, Roger Rapelle, Jerry Vader, and Tom Jordan.

As the game progressed, Mr. Harding was noted as playing an excellent game for his age, quoted one of the senior boys. Mr. Turlo was quoted as saying that the faculty was in top notch physical condition.

Senior boys on the team commented on the fine physical condition of members of the faculty team.

Most of the senior boys had never played basketball before and the few that had hadn't done so since their freshman year. The faculty team, however, was made up primarily of coaches, three of whom were basketball coaches.

The faculty led the seniors all the way.

F.H.S. GOLF TEAM LOSES ONLY TWO FROM LAST YEAR

Golf is beginning to come into its own for the first time at Farmington High School. This is the third year of participation in the sport at F. H. S.

The golf team figures to do much better this year than last. The team lost only two mainstays, Craig Rockafellow and Paul Thomas. Varsity lettermen who are returning are Captain Sid Bishop, Rodney Layton and Russ Desmelik. Jerry Porman received a J. V. letter last year.

Some of this year's prospects are Glen Bishop, Dave Reutz, Dick Denison, Dick Barbour and Leonard Bischof.

More meets will be held this year than last. The schedule is not available at this time.
