Spring Best Time To Move Shrubs
Ornamental shrubs should be transplanted before their buds open this spring, according to Joseph T. Cox, extension specialist in landscape architecture, Michigan State University, passes along these suggestions in planting shrubs:
Cut back old dried and broken roots cleanly and thin branches to reduce the leaf surface by about one-third, depending on the amount of roots lost in digging and pruning. Dig the hole deep enough to allow the roots to spread, but in their natural position, at the same depth as the shrub grew in the nursery.
Work mellow soil around the roots. When all roots have been covered, firm the soil by light tamping. Then fill the remainder of the hole with water and allow to soak in before raking the dirt loosely to complete the planting.
Spread a two to three inch mulch around the newly planted shrub. Use a layer of a couple of handfuls of a readily available plant food around each shrub.

Department Of Health Questions Value Of Fluoride In Toothpaste
The Michigan Department of Health recently warned against "accepting at face value claims for any toothpaste with fluoride added," Dr. Fred Wertheimer, head of the department's public health dentistry section, said dental authorities agree that "There is as yet no accepted proof of the value of fluoride toothpaste in preventing tooth decay."
The Michigan Department of Health, Dr. Wertheimer said, has had a number of requests for information on the effectiveness of fluoride toothpastes.
"American Dental Association officials tell us that the evidence on the value of the toothpaste won't be available for a year or two," he advised. The claims made for fluoride toothpaste are premature, and we hope the product will not be used indiscriminately in Michigan.

Dr. Wertheimer quoted American Dental Association heads as advising that "Use of the dentifrices ... may not be objectionable in children. However, inadequate fluoride in drinking water during the years that the teeth were developing."
"As far as we're concerned," he said, "it's still true that it's best not to use toothpaste until you know how to brush your teeth that counts, not the brand of toothpaste you use."
He said application of fluoride to the teeth of children or better still, fluoridation of public water supplies, "represents the proven and very effective use of fluoride in reducing tooth decay. Until the manufacturers of fluoride toothpaste come up with similar proof, we cannot rely on a dentifrice to give us the precise amount of fluoride needed to help prevent tooth decay."
The Michigan Department of Health spokesman urged that families interested in reducing tooth decay among children "should check without delay to see if the water supply in your community has the recommended amount of fluoride. If not, fluoridation of the water supply can be started at low cost, and we know from eleven years of study in Grand Rapids that fluoridation will reduce tooth decay in children on an average by 67 per cent. Unlike claims for fluoride toothpaste," he concluded, "the benefit from fluoridated water is indisputably proved."

Events In Europe Affect Michigan City Planning
To a remarkable extent, events in Europe have had a profound effect on city planning in Michigan, according to Harlow O. Whittemore, professor of landscape architecture at the University of Michigan.
The professor cites the Greek struggle for independence from the Turkish empire from 1821 to 1831. "The American people were then in the infancy of their nation," he said, "and it led to a revival of interest in everything Greek." Professor Whittemore explains.
He points out that "Greek revival" found its expression in Southern Michigan and other states in the many examples of the "Greek Revival" architecture. He also pointed out that "Greek revival" found its expression in a great central square or circle where a church or public building was intended. Such a scheme is found in Coldwater.
He explains that some towns such as Ann Arbor, founded in 1824, had two wide streets, but used the old Roman forum plan of setting the public square or courthouse on an entire block to one side of the intersection.
Professor Whittemore goes on to say that the generous width of some of the main streets such as 80 feet in Ann Arbor, 99 feet in Dexter and about 100 feet in Techemen, Sturgis, and East Lansing is the result of accident, or forward looking to the automobile age.
"Farmers came to town with horses and long wagons. When hitched to the railings along the sidewalks, the wagons protruded far into the street and one needed a 100-foot width in order to go behind them," he explains.

Early Streets, Roads In Farmington Have Interesting Name Sources

This is the first in a series of articles on the history and development of the Farmington community, compiled by members of the various Girl Scout and Brownie Troops in the area as part of a Scout project.

By MARYA DICKERSON
Troop 27
When the first man first came to this section of the country, he found this area, which is now called Farmington, covered with a dense forest. The first settlers, by the Indians as a hunting ground; and through here passed their long trail known as Shiawassee, over which they traveled in the early years of the settlement. As the years went by, this trail was used by the Indians when they came from the north to collect their bounty from the north.

When the first settlers arrived in 1824, this trail became the center of the community, and the business district, as such, was at the intersection near the present Baptist Church. During the early years of our community, the settlers called this the Detroit Road. About the year 1825, the name of Shiawassee was adopted. Farmington was organized as a village in 1827, and the village grew, and soon the business district moved to the north, to a place called Grand River, but in 1872, it was called Main Street. Division Street, which connected Shiawassee to Main Street, is now called Division Street.

SAFE DRIVERS USE TWO SETS OF RULES, SAYS M. T. A. HEAD

"Greater knowledge of 'rules of the road' can prevent a large number of traffic accidents," declares L. D. Rahilly, president of the Michigan Trucking Association. "Today's driver has two sets of rules governing his driving," Rahilly stated. "One set consists of governmental laws, the other in the rules of common sense and decency."
"The two most important rules in the latter set are the 'golden rule' and the rule of 'defensive driving' - which means, in effect, that you drive expecting the other driver to do the wrong thing," MTA's president listed several other rules of the road.
1. Speed should never exceed posted limits in towns and on the highways. Michigan's new speed law reduces a speed limit of 65 miles per hour during the day and 55 miles per hour at night on all state and county roads. It is unlawful to drive faster regardless of conditions. (Limits on roads and streets in communities are set at 25 miles per hour or less, unless otherwise posted.)
2. Keep to the right, except when overtaking another vehicle. You do not legally hold the right-of-way over vehicles if they have made a complete stop, entering from side roads, intersections and driveways. Approach these with caution.
3. For every ten miles an hour of speed, keep one car length behind.
4. Make sure the way is clear before passing another vehicle.
5. Keep as far right as possible when meeting an oncoming vehicle. Never pull to the left to avoid an oncoming vehicle in your lane.
6. Reduce your speed at night so that you can stop in the distance which is illuminated by your headlights. Don't light your way by guessing or following other vehicles.

Broomfield To Seek Nomination To 18th Congressional District Seat

State Senator William S. Broomfield announced last week that he will seek the Republican nomination for Congress from the 18th Congressional district.
Broomfield said: "Since our present representative, Gray A. Donahue, announced his retirement, many people and groups in the 18th district have expressed their desire that I seek the seat."
"On the basis of the encouragement given me and my own desire to represent my district in the Congress of the United States, I have decided to be a candidate for the Republican nomination in August."
"I believe that my legislative duties in Lansing these past eight years have given me the background and experience to be able to serve in Washington."
"I shall wage a vigorous campaign on the platform of President Dwight D. Eisenhower.
"I believe every congressional seat is of vital importance. I shall approach problems of national interest from the same realistic and practical attitude I have employed as a state legislator."
"I am totally committed to the preservation of freedom and the maintenance of peace and prosperity for all."
Broomfield, 34, is completing his first term in the State Senate from the 21st district of Oakland County. He served six years in the State House of Representatives previous to his election as State Senator.
He was the youngest man in legislative history of Michigan to serve as a speaker-protem.
His legislative record includes the introduction and fight for bills which have increased workers' compensation, unemployment benefits, state aid for mentally retarded children and crippled children, a $200 million loan to distressed school district, and higher pay for teachers.
He has sponsored legislation for improved water and sewage facilities state-wide and authorized the famous Broomfield "ice box" law which protects children from the dangers of suffocation in abandoned refrigerators.

Dalapon Is Best Quackgrass Killer

Home gardeners and growers can get a lot of help from chemicals this year in their annual battle against quackgrass.
B. H. Grigsby, a weed researcher at Michigan State University, suggests that quackgrass chemicals are available for vegetables planted the latter part of May or the first part of June, and can save a great deal of labor.
Grigsby recommends Dalapon as a spray treatment on the basis of last year's tests. Dalapon, he says, is just as effective - if not more so - than malic hydrazide, and it is a bit cheaper.
The weed researcher indicates that quackgrass should have six or eight inches of new growth before spraying it with the chemical. It can be plowed down four or five days later.
Then, in about four weeks the seed can be planted. That will settle the quackgrass problem for this season.
Last year's tests showed that cucumbers, corn and bean fields and snap beans were not affected at all by the quackgrass chemicals. And beans are about the most sensitive crop on which Dalapon could be used, Grigsby assures.
He stresses, however, that growers should wait for weeks after the spray is applied before the seed goes in the soil.
