Marketing Agent Recommends Best Grocery Buys

School routines have taken over, but three good meals a day is still a requirement in most homes. Several locally grown vegetables and fruits are of fine quality and budget priced, and large poultry supplies are available.

Michigan potatoes have greatly improved in quality since digging first started. Excellent growing conditions have made the size and quality of Michigan potatoes the best in many years.

Heavy corn and celery supplies make these items reasonable buys, states Mrs. Josephine Lawyer, Consumer Marketing Information Agency. Cooler weather in the spring delayed crops so that shoppers are enjoying these and other vegetables later in the year than usual.

Broiler-fryers and turkeys continue at prices to interest shoppers.

Peak supplies of broiler-fryers are bringing about 20 per cent more to market than last year at this time. There is a bumper crop of 16 per cent more turkeys this year with little price variation between sizes. When choosing, allow 1/2 to 3/4 pound of ready to cook bird per person.

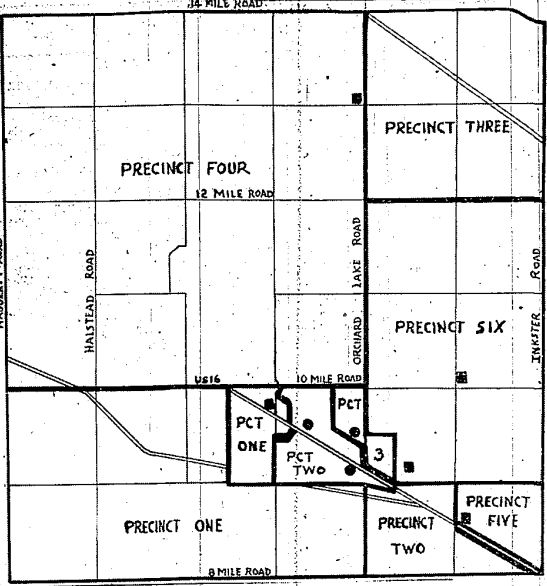

Supplies of grass-fed or range-fed cattle are heavier. Better beef buys include top quality ground beef and hamburger, and cuts for moist heat cookery.

Top quality veal is scarce, but larger calves in the market are bringing plenty of darker colored meat at fairly reasonable cost compared to other meats.

Apples, peaches, plums, and cantaloupe offer a choice of Michigan grown fruits.

Since the peach season will be finished by the last of the month, take advantage of the local supply for freezing or canning.

The small and medium-sized eggs are now the best buy when figured by the pound. Small eggs weigh a minimum of 18 ounces per dozen; medium eggs a minimum of 21 ounces.

NEXT TUESDAY a record number of city and township voters are expected to flock to the polls for the Presidential Election. This map is designed to assist electors in locating their precinct and their proper polling place.

Around The Circle In Staman Acres MRS. WILLIAM SMITH GR. 4-8292

The profile this week is a cooperative one, for it draws a picture of all the families who turned out in such great number for the Halloween party last Sunday. Cooperative is the word for it, too, for without such team work as displayed by the men, women and children, the affair could not have gone so well. A big huzzah goes out for all Staman Acres-ites.

The first bouquet goes to chairman Margaret Sivy. She was a tireless worker and the excellent planning she and the committee did proved this point. Leo Sivy helped plan the fun, too, and he and Joyce Thompson provided the pumpkins for their "back yard storehouse."

The prizes were the best the kiddies could ask for and to Margaret, Pat and Jack Burke, Jane Taylor, Bea Sisy, Mar Esser, Fran Christensen, Joanne Smith, Jack Williams, Bev and Jim Ellis and Barb and Donald Katterman planned and carried out the games for tots, intermediates, teenagers and adults.

Our local dramatist, Jerric Brock of Belmont Drive, reports that the Players are readying another fine play and she heads up the properties department. The play, "Lo and Behold!" is to be put on in the Staman Acres on November 16, 17, 18, and Jerric reports she has plenty of tickets. A group party is in the wind so anyone interested can contact Jerric at GR. 4-8081.

A board meeting of the Staman Acres Civic Association will be held next Monday evening in the Jack Cross home at 3113 Belmont Drive. Meetings are to be held the first Monday of every month and it will be at approximately 8 p.m. Anyone wishing a subject to be discussed at the meeting is asked to attend the meeting and present their views.

The Torch Drive committee for the Staman Acres section is on the march. Captain Alice Oben heads the women and volunteers are Judy Hanby, Margaret Wheeler, Eileen Ranzenburger and Fran Christensen.

Fran has had a very unpleasant task headed on her for she must go out of Staman Acres, across Orchard Lake and do 40 houses on a volunteer for the area has responded to the call for workers.

Charlotte Waskowski entertained a working crew last Wednesday in her home in the woods on Staman Acres. The coffee and cookies was a buffer against the real purpose of the get-together, the executing of "kissing rings" to be donated to the "Lo and Behold" of St. Lawrence Church this coming Saturday and Sunday.

This is a holiday decoration in which you hang your missing or forgotten Christmas cards, kissing anyone who walks under it. The rings

Report State Bean Yield To Be Biggest On Record

Lovers of bean soup and the old favorite, baked beans, should have no difficulty this year in finding available supplies of the essential ingredient. Michigan, the leading bean producing state, has the largest crop in its history, it was reported.

The crop is nearly harvested in the Saginaw valley and Thumb districts where most of the bean crop is grown. Yields this year are expected to run 3,322,000 hundredweight. The crop is nearly a fifth above last year, and about one half above average.

Michigan produces the Michellite bean, a small, round, non-flat type of white bean, which is much preferred by processors because it does not mush up in commercial canning. The Michellite is also the choice of many housewives for the same reason. The Michellite is the smallest white bean grown.

These girls busy with ribbon, sequins and berries were Pat Burke, Margaret Sivy, Judy Hanby, Margaret Wheeler, Joanne Smith and Jean Lutzen.

Jim Ellis of Rocky Crest had promised to drive around the winding roads of Staman Acres blowing one blast if a girl and two if a boy. But the news reached all by telephone that Bev had her girl, a 7 1/2 pound baby, last Wednesday, October 24. She is in New Grace Hospital.

When completed, the St. Lawrence Seaway will be the longest inland waterway ever created for ocean-going vessels, according to Reader's Digest. Its 744 miles from the mouth of the St. Lawrence to the Great Lakes compares with 103 miles for the Suez Canal and approximately 50 miles for the Panama Canal.

Lighted Ceilings Prove Popular In New Homes COFFEE BREAKS CUSTOM OF EARLY MICHIGAN DUTCH

Have you ever dreamed of working in a kitchen that seemed to have a piece of sunny sky for a ceiling?

New home builders as well as owners interested in modernizing older homes are finding luminous ceilings the perfect answer to producing a cheerful outdoor atmosphere indoors.

Many of the homes displayed by builders during National Home Week, September 15-23, featuring these lighted ceiling areas in their display homes for the first time this year. When properly installed, lighted or luminous ceilings will give an even, comfortable lighting effect in all parts of your room, according to Kaye A. Leighton, General Electric home lighting specialist.

Best of all, the lighting installation itself makes it possible to "lower" those high nine-and-ten-foot ceilings found in many older homes, to a more modern height of about eight feet.

The "lighted ceiling" comes in four "sections," 25 inches by 49 inches and held in place by an outer metal holding frame. On the old ceiling are mounted four eight-foot fluorescent lamps.

White metal egg crate-type shading louvers are also used in many kitchens, but there are also luminous plastic materials which are suitable to cover the opening beneath the ceiling.

One important tip to keep in mind is that the entire ceiling cavity should be painted white, the lighting specialist said.

"LO AND BEHOLD" FARMINGTON PLAYERS

The all-prevailing custom of the coffee break custom at 10 a. m. and 3 p. m. is attributed to the Dutch-Americans who settled in Michigan in 1847. They brought the delightful custom with them to the new country, says F. Clever Bald, assistant director of the University of Michigan Collections. It's backed up by the Netherlands Information Service, Holland, Michigan.

According to the latter organization, nearly everybody in Holland and the surrounding area takes a break for coffee around 9:30 to 10 a. m. Business people usually go to a nearby restaurant where they discuss politics or civic matters. Factory workers usually carry a "lunch" while on the farms, lunch is often brought to the fields.

It's further reported that the housewives also take a coffee break, often going to the neighbors for a few minutes' relaxation and talk. This is usually sweetened by a cookie, doughnut or roll and the friendly interval is limited to about fifteen minutes.

The Netherlands Information Service further volunteers this information. The coffee break at the Netherlands Embassy in the old Dutch custom of serving coffee at 11 o'clock each morning, a custom that prevails in the Netherlands today. In the Netherlands coffee is often served in the afternoon, too, and around here many people also take coffee breaks at about three o'clock.
