Bible Comment:
Jesus Outwardly Proclaims His Messiahship
It would appear on the surface that Jesus' triumphant entry into Jerusalem was in variance with what He had been telling the disciples about the nature of His kingdom.
Jesus had been trying to make it plain that His kingdom was not of this world. He had not come to set up material power, but for a deeper spiritual purpose.
Did not His triumphal entry into Jerusalem, with the people acclaiming Him as king, give an altogether different emphasis?
Jesus may have realized that "His hour was come" and that this was a great outward avowal of His Messiahship. He may have been challenging the faith and devotion to the people as He had already challenged the faith and devotion of the inner circle of disciples. He was inviting the people to recognize His Messiahship and thus prepare the way for the fulfillment of His earthly mission, which was so shortly to follow.
As a part of this outward witness to His own Messiahship came the symbolic purging of the temple and the driving out of those who had materialized religion.
So extreme an acknowledgment of His Messiahship, with its challenge, could not but bring results. While the people welcomed Him, throwing their garments in the way of spreading pain, branches and crying, "Hosanna to the son of David," the priests and scribes, the official representatives of religion, were roused to indignation.
The very triumph of this entry of Jesus into Jerusalem may have instilled the opposition to Him and hurried the events that were bringing Him to His sacrificial death.
