

Stainless steel, subjected to wind speeds of 4,500 miles per hour, will burn and disintegrate in less than seven seconds, according to the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics.

No doubt you will find a myriad of uses for plastic bags at Christmas time. To clean them, just rinse them out and dry them between dish towels as you do a nylon fabric. Turn them inside out and repeat the rolling between the towels.

Warn Against Carbon Monoxide Poison In Winter

Carbon monoxide declares open season on human beings in winter, the Michigan Department of Health said.

Accidental deaths from carbon monoxide poisoning show a sharp increase when the weather turns cold, the health department said. A leading contributor of the seasonal upsurge is the habit—often fatal—some people have of running their car's engine inside the garage with the garage doors closed.

Other leading causes of accidental carbon monoxide poisoning are faulty mufflers and tailpipes on cars and trucks, improper venting of home "space heaters" and improper ventilation of factories and workshops.

Carbon monoxide creeps up silently because it can't be seen, smelled or tasted. Besides being odorless and colorless, it has no irritating and therefore warning effect on the nose, throat or eyes.

Carbon monoxide is formed whenever materials containing carbon are incompletely burned because of insufficient oxygen. Common fuels containing carbon are coal, gasoline, natural gas, oil and wood.

If the amount of carbon monoxide in the air being breathed is small, a person may notice a tight feeling across the forehead. This is followed by a throbbing headache, dizziness, a flushed face and redness of the eyeballs. The person may become sick enough to vomit.

Carbon monoxide poisoning can be avoided by following a few simple rules, the health department said. These include:

1. Open the garage doors before starting a car inside a garage.
2. Check the muffler and tailpipe of your car or truck for leaks. In winter, drive with at least one window partially open. It is particularly important to open windows when parking with the engine running.
3. Vent all space heaters to the outside.
4. Always ventilate a room in which a gas space heater is being used.
5. Don't burn propane or butane gases in stoves designed for natural gas, or vice versa.
6. Check furnaces annually for leaks and poor fittings.
7. In factories and other indoor work areas, take air samples frequently.
