Lake Eves site. The request for funds may be defeated by a combination of legislators representing Whitmore residents who don't want BVS, and those from other areas who would welcome the school. Such a move would serve to once again re-open the discussion of a new home for BVS.

Michigan's one man grand jury system may be taken before the U. S. Supreme Court to test its constitutionality. Judge Timothy Quinn of Caro, sitting as a one man grand jury has ordered St. Clair Sheriff Mayor Thomas S. Welsh to jail for contempt after the mayor refused to answer any of the court's questions. He was ordered to testify about reports of corruption in some Detroit suburbs. Welsh has indicated that he will fight the charge and is "deliberately" seeking a court test of the Michigan law.

Generally specific powers and purposes are vested in grand juries. They hear only testimony presented by the prosecution and witnesses important to the specific case. Hearings are held in secret so that witnesses may be more willing to tell all they know. Testimony is not made public. But the grand jury is limited in purpose. It does not try a case. In effect, its main power after hearing all testimony is to determine if there is enough evidence to bring the case to trial.

"Multiple-man" grand juries sit in most states. The Michigan law, passed in 1951, provides for judges to act as one man juries. Opponents of the system say the law is now distorted from its original intended effect. They contend that grand juries now try to make a witness incriminate himself.

In the Welsh case, the issue at point is whether or not Judge Quinn can enforce the contempt charge, thereby making the grand jury testimony public. Welsh's attorney says this is inconsistent with grand jury law.

Many Michigan crimes could not be solved without the one man grand jury, say supporters of the law. They point out that it is the only way possible to protect witnesses from intimidation. As a matter of policy the U. S. Supreme Court will not judge the constitutional aspects of a law if other ways to resolve a case can be found. The Welsh case may force the issue.

Now Is Time To Have Dogs Vaccinated

When scheduling vaccinations and immunizations for members of your family don't forget the family canine pet, the Michigan Department of Health advises.

This is the best time of year to have your dog vaccinated against rabies, the health department said, because rabies spreads most rapidly in dogs in the "dog days" of February, March and April.

Some counties in Michigan require anti-rabies vaccination before dogs can be licensed. Compulsory vaccination plus elimination of strays have resulted in a sharp drop in rabies in recent years, but the disease will make a comeback as soon as dog vaccinations start to lag, the health department said. Last year 23 confirmed cases of rabies in animals were reported to the state health department. The last case of rabies in a human in Michigan occurred in 1948.

Having your dog vaccinated may save your own life as well as his, the health department said. Rabies is always fatal in humans as well as in animals.

APPLE BUYS

Just right for after-school nibbling are small size McIntosh, Jonathan, or Delicious apples. These have been carefully stored from Michigan's beautiful crop of last fall says the Consumer Marketing Information Agent, Mrs. Josephine Lawyer. Shoppers will find these small size apples low in cost compared to some of the large ones now being shipped from other states. Actually the children will get more minerals when they eat two small apples instead of one large one. Most of the minerals are hidden just beneath the skin, and two small size apples have more skin surface.
