

It's Easy To Return To College

Schoolcraft College can open doors for you - that's what the college claims and intends to prove to local residents Thursday, July 26, when it holds an information night at 8 p.m. in the gymnasium.

The college is located at 18000 Haggerty between Six and Seven Mile in Livonia.

The public is being invited to the campus that evening to get information on the college programs and admission and registration procedures.

Representatives from the admissions, counseling, instruction, community services and student affairs departments will disseminate information and answer questions.

The evening is intended for people who are interested in taking a class for enjoyment or improvement of skills as well as those who are interested in enrolling in an academic or vocational program, according to Vice President for Student Affairs Edward McNally.

It will show people that "coming back to school is a simple thing," McNally said. "Some people are fearful of taking college courses," counselor Robert Burnside said. "We'll show them that it's not that difficult and that there are others out here like them taking classes."

The program will start with a general presentation on the college. Then visitors will break into small groups for detailed information on admissions and registration.

Mothers can get information on the day care center which is open from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. Preschool children can be enrolled in the center for a $5 registration fee and 60 cents per hour while mothers attend classes. A veterans counselor will explain GI education benefits to prospective students.

A growing percentage of Schoolcraft students are in the over-30 age range, and many are enrolled for a brush-up course or for their own enjoyment.

Barbara Geil, director of admissions, said that the former concept of college students being in the 18-25 age range is changing. Currently about one-third of Schoolcraft's students are over 30, she said.

Schoolcraft offers a wide range of one and two-year vocational programs as well as programs in health careers, business and liberal arts.

Catalogues and brochures with explanations on the programs will be available.

Pond Life Course Topic

Area residents still have time to enroll in a class entitled "Michigan Wildlife - The Pond," which will be given at the Nature Center of Kensington Metropark near Milford from July 19 - July 26.

Classes will meet on Thursday evenings from 7 to 10 p.m. and Saturday mornings from 9 to 11 a.m., with four sessions conducted by Miss Patricia Eising, supervising park naturalist.

Details, including registration, are available by contacting the University Center for Adult Education, Wayne State University, Detroit.
