An experiment in the use of semi-marked State Police patrol cars on a limited basis has been started in the Flint area.

If successful, several will be placed in service in sections having a high nighttime accident rate. In addition to Flint, the first of these areas will include Lansing, Flint, Rock and Pontiac.

The cars will be shifted to other areas where there is need.

Intended for both day and night operation, the cars will supplement but not replace, unmarked and marked patrol cars. Unmarked cars are used only during the day and not at night to avoid alarming drivers stopped for violations by a car not easily identified as a police vehicle. They are, however, driven by uniformed officers as will be the semi-marked cars.

The semi-marked car has the State Police shield on both doors and the stop light on the hood, but there are no other exterior markings and the siren is concealed. It is equipped with a portable oscillating red light with a magnetic base to place on the top when stopped for an accident or other emergency.

The cars will be of various colors and will carry regular license plates.

Use of unmarked cars has received public approval and has been very successful in checking the wilful type of violator who observes the law only when a marked patrol car is in sight. It is hoped to accomplish similar results with the semi-marked car.
