Special 'Any Deer' Materials Readied

Regulations, permit applications and instructions for obtaining permits for Michigan's 1937 special deer hunting seasons will be available from all license dealers in the state after September 23.

These materials also will be available at Conservation Department district offices. The information and applications are being mailed from the Department's Lansing office and some dealers may have supplies on hand before September 23, but distribution will not be completed until that date.

In order to be eligible for a permit, a hunter must submit an application postmarked no later than October 10. If the number of applications exceeds the permit quota for any area, a drawing will be held about October 20 to determine distribution of permits.

Special seasons have been set to take deer of any age, either sex, in 31 designated food shortage or crop damage areas. Coal for the special seasons is a harvest of 17,750 deer in addition to the regular buck kill.

Engineer-Manager For County Roads Retiring After 41 Years Of Service

A banquet Wednesday night, October 27, will culminate 41 years of service to Oakland County for Leon V. Belknap, retiring engineer-manager for the Oakland County Road Commission.

This event, destined to bring out much of the history of the county, will be held at Pontiac Elks Temple at 7 p.m. Tickets may be obtained until September 27 from James B. Baynes, chief engineer for the Road Commission. The public is invited.

The career of Leon Belknap is synonymous with progress of Oakland County over the last 40 years from the days of a token road gang with horse-drawn equipment. Today the county has more than 2,750 miles of roads. Belknap came here from the Gladwin County road department in July, 1916, as Oakland County road engineer. The only significant pavement in the county at this time was a 16-foot single lane strip which was Woodward Avenue from Detroit to Pontiac. The Oakland County Road Commission had been set up shortly before.

In 1923 the ambitious project of widening Woodward into an eight-lane superhighway was launched. It entailed the moving of the Grand Trunk railroad eastward from its roadbed then paralleling the crowded, narrow pavement and the old Detroit United Railway (D.U.R.) electric interurban line.

Belknap's last work was helping design the new modern Oakland County Road Commission terminal plant on Pontiac Lake Road, officially opened last week.

Belknap had been with the county road organization 41 years when he retired this summer. He stayed on as consultant while the new headquarters buildings were being erected and occupied. He worked long helping design the new plant, a far cry from the old time layouts the road department utilized when he came here. Then Oakland County's highways were sand and gravel trails winding between widely separated communities among the maze of Oakland County's lakes.

Born December 22, 1895, in Whittier, Belknap was graduated with a degree in civil engineering from Michigan Agricultural College (now Michigan State University) in 1910 and became deputy surveyor of Washtenaw County where his father was surveyor. Following work with the Illinois Central Railroad and the U.S. Gypsum Company, he was married in 1912 to Helen Martindale of Grand Rapids, and while on their honeymoon trip he accepted a position with the Kansas City Terminal Railroad, designing tunnels and viaducts with which Kansas City abounds. Three years later he was called back to Michigan by the Gladwin County road department, and a year later was called to Oakland County as highway engineer.

MAN GROWN TIMBER

Man is no longer dependent upon Mother Nature to grow giant wood timbers. New improved glues and techniques make it possible to glue one- and two-inch boards together to produce giant Paul Bunyan size timbers which will span a 300-foot building without supporting arches. These timbers may be as much as six feet thick at their deepest point. Douglas fir is the most widely used lumber in glulam timbers because it has great strength, is beautiful and long lasting.

SANTA PAULA, CALIF. DAILY CHRONICLE: "Congressional economy advocates have come up with a startling answer to the argument that the budget can't be put without impairing the national defense. At the New Deal peak in 1940, they point out, cost of the Federal government per person was $68; today defense costs alone are at an all time peak of $146 per person."
