State Gets Tough With Bad Drivers

LANSING—Michigan's problem drivers are receiving the "get tough" treatment from the state's enforcement agencies, a report covering activities in the driver improvement program of the Secretary of State's office revealed.

Secretary of State James M. Hare said revocations and suspensions on Michigan's point system were up more than 2,500 during the first six months of 1964.

Of this total, 563 licenses were revoked, while 6,258 were suspended. Totals in 1963 were 289 revocations and 4,030 suspensions. "Vigorous action in suspensions and revocations has brought about a reduction in the number of licenses restricted," Hare said.

Tempering the tougher treatment of the chronic problem drivers is an acceleration of the positive aspect of driver services . . . the driver improvement program through the multiple interview programs, the newly-established conference interview programs, and the warning letters to persons who are at the seven, eight, and nine-point levels.

Multiple Interview instructions increased more than 1,000 during the first half of 1964, while warning letters went up from 15,775 last year to more than 40,000 already in 1964.

In the other phase of the driver licensing program, mandatory suspensions for felonies, drunk driving, and reckless driving went up nearly 600 from 2,985 to 3,584. Unsatisfied judgment suspensions under financial responsibility laws jumped from 1,922 to 2,434. Accident suspensions were up from 2,693 to 3,110.
