

OU Looks For UYA Volunteers

Oakland University is now considering new applications from persons interested in enrolling for the fall in its federally funded University Year for ACTION program.

Participants will work off campus for a year in OU community service projects in Oakland County and earn a year's academic credit for their efforts, Harvey Hohauser, UYA coordinator, said. Hohauser said "maturity and dedication will be as important as an applicant's experience or major field." He explained that participants are expected to work and live at the poverty level to better understand the problems of the people they are trying to help.

Oakland University launched its UYA program this summer with the help of a $188,505 grant from the government.

U. S. Rep. William S. Brockmeyer was instrumental in obtaining the grant for OU. ACTION is the governmental agency created to direct all federal citizen volunteer programs including the UYA program. Volunteers in Service to America (VISTA), and the Peace Corps.

The 40 students now working in Oakland County are expected to pay all their own expenses including OU tuition on a $15 a week stipend, Hohauser explained. The current group of volunteers ranging in age from 18 to 43 years is "not finding that easy," Hohauser warned. The students work a minimum of 40 hours a week and are prohibited by federal guidelines from holding an other job.

Hohauser said the current projects, which have been cited as programmatic models by Washington, include helping the Oakland County Juvenile Court, working with Pontiac officials and organizations in helping cut the Latino drop-out rate in that city, and working with state and local agencies in the manpower program Project GAIN.

The students carry actual case loads in assisting probation officers for the Oakland County Juvenile Court. The students help the children get part-time jobs, find merchants who are willing to donate paint, lumber and other household items, and others who are willing to give the children free ice or roller skating time, Hohauser said.

The Latino project this summer includes working with children at Crofoot and Whittier Schools, tutoring children and adults in the homes, working in an educational recreational program for LaCASA, a Latino organization in Pontiac, and working with Al Sanchez, director of Latino affairs for Pontiac, in a need assessment program, Hohauser said.

Student participants in GAIN are working with the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) and state and local agencies. They tutor neighborhood youth corps students, work with unemployed and underemployed adults, and counsel and assist in educational placement for adults.

Applications are currently being accepted for the UYA program at 203 Wilson Hall.
