

Day Camp Means Summer Fun

DAY CAMP means many kinds of fun for Camp Fire Girls. Here naturalist Joan Hassel-bach takes a group on one of the Lower Huron Metro Park's nature trails.

of Garden City, Julie Lyall of Livonia, and Diane Loveday and Barbara Scott of Garden City.

Suburban kids don't have to go far from home to experience the joys of camping.

Last week some 135 Camp Fire Girls from the Wa-No-Su district, which includes Livonia, Garden City, Westland, Plymouth and Redford Township, found the Lower Huron Metro Park ideal for their day camp.

Going out each morning and returning in late afternoon, they worked with adult leaders in a varied program. There were sessions with a naturalist, cookouts, bike hikes and craft work, and the older girls had a night to sleep under the stars.

Observer photographer Harry Mauthe has recorded just a few of their good times here.

HELPING with leaders' children and craft work also are part of the day camp program. At the left, Laura Treff of Westland demonstrates a swimming kick in a tiny pool. Above, Barbara Scott of Garden City weaves an Indian headband.
