

Let-Dovers to Sing For Newcomers Club
The "Let-Dovers" S.O.C. of the Suburbanite Chapter of Sweet Adelines, will sing at the Newcomers Club Christmas Party Luncheon on Monday, December 16, at 12 noon in the Colony Room of the Aunt Jamima Kitchen, Grand River Expressway at Wixom.

Girl Scout Activities

We hope all of you had a nice Thanksgiving, and are looking forward to Christmas. At our November monthly meeting held at the First Methodist Church in Farmington, our neighborhood chairman, Mrs. Leona Sidwell, asked about our singing Christmas Carol at the City Hall this year. I was asked to suggest that each Girl Scout make a waterproof ornament to be placed on the Christmas tree which will be in front of the new City Hall. We would then sing carols for about a half hour.

We hope that the girl scouts from the various troops will want to participate. We would like some idea of the number of troops that will take part, so please call me at 474-9713 and let me know.

OUR NEXT MONTHLY meeting will be held on December 16 and this idea sounds like fun. There will be songs and games for all age groups. Come on, everybody, let's really surprise Mrs. Sidwell and turn out in full force.

Cadet Troop 332 on November 15 had a Father and Daughter Day. It was spent touring the Leader Dog for the Blind Training Center in Rochester, Michigan.

Brownie Troop 127 held an investiture for three new girls on November 12. The new Brownie scouts are Susan Hamler, Karen Stevens and Debbie Tomczek. The girls' mothers attended. After the ceremony we practiced Christmas carols.

Junior Troop 1028 started meeting November 12. Leader Mrs. Russell Cleveland, because of the illness of co-leader Mrs. Walter Neumann, was assisted by Cadette Janet Sienke of Troop 338. The troop has 21 girls.

Junior Troop 355 leader Mrs. Dora Wadlie and co-leader Mrs. Dorothy Green, welcomed the

A FATHER-SON TEAM of deer hunters, Ed and Fred Wright, were able to bring back a couple of bucks this week. The Wrights bagged their deer hunting near Cedar River, north of Monomie in the upper peninsula.

Digger Clint Starr Bridges the Gap Here

Clint Starr, Australian exchange student, is perhaps one of Farmington Senior High's most popular international pupils in recent years. Though several former exchange students have found it difficult to bridge the language barrier, because American English is slightly different from the Oxford English most foreign students have learned, Clint has had a minimum of trouble. However, Clint is careful to use the midwestern colloquialisms with his friends, which he explains, "greatly clarifies the ideas I attempt to communicate to others."

If Mr. Starr were to use his own jargon, though, things might be considerably different. For instance, suppose Clint wished to give his impressions of America to some Australian friends. He might say something like this: "Often I was up a gum tree (in a quarry) as to some American customs. There are a lot more shivvos (parties) than in Australia, but sometimes the bixkes (kids) at the shivvo win up the night with a prang (wild blast), and for some reason, they seem to think that this is something to kick (boast) about."

"The average American consumes more tucker (food) than the digger (Australian) — so much so that I put on a stone (at pounds) while I was in America. "Everything in the United States is more expensive than in Australia. Even churcho (chewing gum) is five pence (five cents) instead of two pence (two cents). "But, like Australia, Americans too have their rat-bags (eccentricities) and sticky-bodies (busy-bodies). "However, in America, there are very few bludges (blunders) that you have to shout (pay) for."

Clint has lived in the "big smoke" (city) all his life. But sometimes he leaves Sydney to spend the summer "out back o' Bourke" (wilderness desert) on a "station" (ranch). Despite the adjustment Clint has had to make as a result of the language barrier, he enjoys the United States very much and he wishes to make several trips here after his return to Australia.

Madrigal Club Plans Dec. 8th Christmas Concert at WSU

The Madrigal Club of Detroit, Barbara Axtell of Broadview and August Maekelbergh, conductor, will sing in Christmas Concert on Tuesday, December 8, at 8:30 p.m. in Community Arts Auditorium, Wayne State University campus. Elizabeth Salda is accompanist for this 35-voiced women's chorus.

NOW CELEBRATING its 50th season of music, the primary objective of the Club is to provide the best in choral music to its audiences. Under the exciting baton of August Maekelbergh, for the past 18 years, and his predecessor, Charles Frederic Morse who organized the chorus in 1915, the objective has been achieved. A sampling of our last concert was used by the University of Michigan as part of Michigan Week observance last spring, and the chorus has broadcast throughout Europe on July 12 via Euradio from Brussels.

MICHIGAN'S FIRST Lady, Mrs. George Romney, has graciously accepted the invitation to be honorary President for this Golden Anniversary season and will be honored at a reception following the concert on December 8. Farmington residents singing in this concert are Miss S. Bar-

REAL OLD FASHIONED PEANUT BUTTER COOKIES

After a summer of cool salads, platters of cold meats and outdoor cooking, now for Mothers with children in school, it's regular nourishing lunches ready for the crowd at noon. One of the standards for lunch is soup and sandwiches. Add something sweet for dessert and you have a perfect lunch either at home or in the lunch box. For the sandwiches, the ideas are endless. Starting with peanut butter is the best rule and from there, the list is up to you! The peanut butter itself can give you variety and most people keep Shedd's Smooth Peanut Butter which is especially thick with sliced banana and Shedd's Crunchy Peanut Butter which goes well with jelly. A sandwich with Shedd's Old Fashioned Peanut Butter is a special treat. The cookies you like to keep on hand for hungry school boys and girls really should be made with Shedd's Old Fashioned Peanut Butter. Here's the recipe:

- 1/2 cup Shedd's Old Fashioned Peanut Butter
1/2 cup Keyko Margarine
1/2 cup dk. brown sugar
1/2 cup white sugar
1 whole egg
1/4 teaspoon vanilla
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon soda
1 cup enriched flour
Cream Shedd's Old Fashioned Peanut Butter with the Keyko Margarine and beat in remaining ingredients in order given. The mix will be quite soft at this point, so have an extra cup of flour ready to add, a little at a time, till the mixture is stiff enough to drop by spoonfuls on a greased cookie sheet. Allow the cookies to bake 10 minutes and then take a fork to press each gently. Bake your cookies at 350 degrees about 10 minutes. Happy Baking to you...
