22 Complete Civil Defense Emergency Medical Class Here

Certificates were presented December 14 to 22 Farmington area adults upon completion of the Civil Defense Medical Emergency Course held recently at Cloverdale School. These ambitious students are now prepared to meet most medical emergencies with new insight.

The program is designed to train people to care for themselves and their families in common everyday emergencies as well as preparing the student in case of a local disaster, either natural or man-made.

THREE OF THE lessons covered basic first aid procedures including artificial respiration, splinting of fractures, dressing of wounds, and treatment of hemorrhage. "Panic Control" and "Panic Stopper" were the highlights of the discussion on psychological first aid. A sample survival kit and other survival supplies were shown to the group along with instructions on how to prepare yourself, your family, your home, and your community in case of an attack.

Exactly how does an atomic or hydrogen bomb work? What are the effects of radiation upon the body and how does one treat them? What protective measures can one take against nuclear fallout? All these and many more questions were answered in the unit on Radiation.

EACH STUDENT practiced the art of giving hypodermics and of taking blood pressures. They learned the four essential steps necessary for the satisfactory administration of medicines. Isolation techniques used in caring for persons with contagious diseases were demonstrated. Cholera, Hepatitis, Plague, Dysentery and Typhus are but a few of the communicable diseases anticipated following a disaster.

At the last class the students converted Cloverdale School into an emergency hospital designed to handle every type of medical or surgical problem from the decontamination of survivors to the emergency birth of a baby.

Many of the classes were augmented by quite realistic

Aldo Vagnozzi Challenges GOP Director

Farmington Democratic leader Aldo Vagnozzi has challenged his Republican counterpart or any one of the Republican township officials may designate to debate the role and contributions the Democratic party has made to the Farmington community.

Vagnozzi said such a debate would clear up the many "false impressions" contained in a statement issued last week by the Farmington Township Republican leader.
