Program on Geology Set By AAUW

The Farmington Branch of the American Association of University Women will meet at the First Farmington Savings and Loan Association Building, Wednesday, April 21, 8 p.m.

Study groups will again present the program which will feature Michigan: Its Historical Geology; How Geology has affected its Economic Development; and a Study on Early Detroit with emphasis on the contributions of Gabriel Richard. Presenting papers on these topics will be Mrs. Richard Armstrong, Mrs. R. C. Kitteridge, and Mrs. Ernest Gaston.

One of the study groups responsible for the program is studying the topic "Bridging the Gap between Science and the Layman" with emphasis on the History of the Earth and Historical Geology. The expansion of knowledge in the natural sciences in the 20th century has been so great that a high proportion of living college graduates are scientific illiterates. This study group is increasing its understanding of the Earth Sciences.

The other study group is studying "Michigan History." This group was originally formed by some newcomers to Michigan wishing to learn more about their adopted state. It has, however, proved popular with natives as well.

Serving on the committee for the meeting are Mrs. Frank Lance, chairman, Mrs. Myron Greenfield, Mrs. Paul Chandler, Mrs. Ray Cranston, Mrs. G. R. Heatter, Mrs. Corneille, and Mrs. William G. Johnson. Hostesses will be Mrs. Gwain Gillespie and Mrs. L. Allen Hurd.

"The Little Foxes" To Be Staged By Local Players

One of the most outstanding dramas of the last decade, the tense, exciting and sinister, "The Little Foxes," has been named as next month's attraction to be presented by the Farmington Players.

This arresting story of the cruelty, greed and grasping ambition of a hate-filled Southern household of 1900, is slated for five performances at the Barn Theatre, beginning May 7.

"The Little Foxes," a harrowing horror story called one of the most finely-wrought dramas ever written by an American, holds keen audience interest in its feeling of impending tragedy. The cunning and vicious Regina, Ben and Oscar—the Hubbard clan—enter into an agreement with a rich Northern investor to build a cotton mill. As the play unfolds, they conspire with great slyness to profit each at the other's expense.

VILLAINY Of the three "foxes" stops at nothing, not even the virtual murder of Regina's invalid husband. From the moment the curtains rise on the first act, tension begins to mount and moves swiftly and surely to a shattering conclusion. "Events of the narrative," wrote the N.Y. Journal-American critic when the play first triumphed on Broadway in 1939, "reach a pitch that is almost unbearable in its statement of human ferocity."

PRIOR ENGAGEMENTS of "The Little Foxes," from the pen of the country's ranking feminine dramatist, Lillian Hellman, have scored resounding successes. The play, which has been seen abroad in London, Moscow and Belgrade, ran on Broadway for 388 performances and for 317 more on the road. On opening night the cast received 24 curtain calls. Screen rights were sold for $150,000.

Lillian Hellman, at 43, occupies an enviable niche in the annals of the stage, as author of such stellar works as "The Children's Hour," "Watch on the Rhine," "The Searching Wind," and most recently "Another Part of the Forest," a study of the same monstrous Hubbard clan which appears in "The Little Foxes," showing them 20 years earlier.

The play's title was suggested by writer Dorothy Parker, who took it from the Bible's "Song of Song." "Take us the foxes, the little foxes that spoil the vines; for our vines have tender grapes." The full extent to which the "vines" are spoiled as Regina pits brother against brother and drives her husband into the grave develops with high suspense in this next production of The Farmington Players.

YMCA Expects More Growth

Tuesday, April 27, will be a very important day in the life of the Farmington Area YMCA. An anticipated 100 men of business and leadership will assemble at Botsford Inn to consider its future growth and development.

The sponsored luncheon is being held to recognize those who have substantially aided the growth of the local YMCA by joining the Century Club for Civic Members. Others will be invited to join their ranks and to help carry this young association into the next stage of development. Every Century Club member will receive the attractive Civic Membership plaque.

THIS EVENT IS being organized by Robert Chesley (Membership Chairman), Robert Hall, Norman Lawton, Russ Nankervis and Robert Williams.

At present, a study is being made to determine if the YMCA is strong enough to spearhead a drive for physical facilities. If there is sufficient interest for such a building in Farmington, further action will be taken. However, there must be a good financial base for the Association of 150 Civic Members before a capital advance can be made.

People interested in any phase of this plan are urged to call the YMCA at 474-9232 and register their interest with Chuck Wise, YMCA Director.
