Mrs. A. Accioli held a coffee club at her home on MacLeaveln last week. Several friends attended and brought their mending. Neighbors attending were Mrs. Davidson, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Ledeman, Mrs. Vincent, Mrs. Kajawa, Mrs. Jorgensen and Mrs. Kopinski. Mrs. Accioli served coffee and cake.
Mr. and Mrs. John Jorgensen celebrated their third wedding anniversary, September 25. They went to the Rotunda Inn for dinner. When the management at the Inn found out about the anniversary they brought Mr. and Mrs. Jorgensen a cake and played the anniversary waltz.

year. Few families have refrigerators. The day's food requirements are bought at the early morning street market, prepared and served the same day. Butane gas for cooking costs a small family about $17 a month. Coal costs $50 a ton! Wine is from 25 cents to $2.60 a quart and is one of the major items in the Frenchman's budget. Eggs are 84 cents a dozen. A No. 2 can of pineapple costs $1.05; a benefit of wage earners. In France so far—after about 25 years of Socialist-controlled Welfare State—the glittering promises obviously haven't been fulfilled. And the future is not bright.

One of the attractive daughters of the family I visited is to be married. She and her fiancé have waited until they could be sure of a flat. Ordinarily they would have waited four or five years. With the other tens-of-thousands who are waiting. However, he finally saved half a year's salary, and using it as a "dowry" managed to get first place on the waiting list for a flat that soon will be vacated. He related this little sad-sad-sad.
In the French Welfare State the housing situation is one of the ugly realities the Socialists don't like to discuss. Outside the main avenues of Paris, you see the deterioration on all sides. I visited some new housing too. I spent a few hours in the residence of a war veteran, who gets priority and extra subsidies. His plain modest flat had no refrigerator or bathtub, and the eight-story building had no elevator.
Some government workers, some professional people and some business owners have much nicer housing. But I seem to recall that the highly advertised Welfare State is created primarily for a benefit of wage earners. In France so far—after about 25 years of Socialist-controlled Welfare State—the glittering promises obviously haven't been fulfilled. And the future is not bright.

Labor, of Washington, D.C., reports that roughly nine out of ten big trucks inspected in a fourth nationwide safety check by the Interstate Commerce Commission were found to have defects or deficiencies, especially in the braking system. More than 12,000 trucks were halted and checked with 88.2 per cent proving faulty.
The U. S. Treasury recently issued a special security issue totaling $1,750,000,000. The interest rate of 4.175 per cent on the issue was the highest since the bank holiday period of 1933.
