Looking Ahead

until 5 p.m. Then they open and remain open until about 10 p.m. Thousands of workers in Belgrade go home at 2 p.m., rest for a couple of hours, then come downtown and promenade. It has happened each evening since I arrived. These people whom I found on the streets in my first contact with Belgrade were the workers and peasants — men and women. Their living standard is unbelievably low.

When my host and guide picked me up at the hotel at 6 p.m., we walked directly to Terazije. The bedraggled worker — peasant procession had begun to thin out. While — collar people had begun to appear. These were mostly Communist Party functionaries employed in Belgrade's government bureaus. Most of them were informally dressed, the men wore jackets draped around their shoulders like capes, and the women in street or office dresses.

Class Distinctions

The living standard of these white — collar Yugoslavians is one-sixth as high as that of their counterparts in America. Their incomes range from $50 to $80 a month. Incomes are comparatively low in the Communist world. Teachers are paid from $30 to $50 a month; university professors from $50 to $85. The only people in Yugoslavia who live well, by American standards, are the top Communist Party officials. They constitute Yugoslavia's "Ruling Class." There are perhaps 20,000 to 30,000 of these among the 500,000 party members in this country of 18,000,000 population.

On my third day in Yugoslavia we drove out to see Tito's palace. He occupies the former King's palace, and he has built a second, more exclusive palace a short distance away. He also has a palatial residence down on the Adriatic coast. Along the slopes of the hill near the palace are a hundred or more very nice homes, with well-kept grounds, the only dwellings I've seen here of such character. My Communist host ignored them as we passed by. "Whose homes are those?" I inquired. "That's where the wealthy capitalists used to live," he said. "Who lives in these homes now?" "Our government officials," he said. I couldn't help but recall that world Communism professes to hate class distinctions, promises to divide up the wealth equally. In Yugoslavia, Communism seems to have overridden these tenets. —G.G.

Incorrect Information

On M. Warner Supplied

A news item which appeared in last week's paper indicating that Manson Warner of Farmington was married and was currently vacationing at a dude ranch in Arizona with his wife was revealed to be incorrect.

Although in Arizona, Manson Warner is not married and was not vacationing at the dude ranch as indicated, it was learned.

The news story was sent to The Enterprise as it appeared in the paper and the mistake apparently made by officials at the dude ranch in Wickenburg, Arizona, from which the release came.

Bel-Aire Hills Civic Assn. Views on Bowling Alley

OPEN LETTER TO FARMINGTON RESIDENTS:

We have a problem; see what you think of it.

We would like to have you help us solve it.

Many of you have been residents of Farmington for many years; but we are not, we are new here. We left the crowded cities and came to this wonderful, secluded, and serene town, so that we, also, could enjoy what God has conferred on this city. Our subdivision was built almost 3 years ago. Everyone of us believes that the single and most important investment we must be purchasing our homes. We thought them safe and secure. However, our doubts are beginning to form.

We were promised by the builder that the property on Orchard Lake Road and Lee Lane was to be a park. Our children, we thought, could enjoy playing there. Instead, the promises disappeared, and the grim picture of a modified park in the form of a gas station appeared. We protested and the storm passed, but not for long. The park is now to be a bowling alley, with a meeting room 20x40. (Confidentially, this looks like a future bar to us.)

Bel-Aire Residents:

Are all bowlers delinquents? It would be interesting to know how many of the property owners in Bel-Aire Subdivision who signed the petition against the proposed bowling alley in Bel-Aire are active participants in this popular sport. Are they in effect telling their children that they are adult delinquents?

I think those who signed are more afraid of the idea of a bar going in than of the bowling alley. Boys benefit only those who own them. On this point only do I agree with my fellow home owners.

Many of us bowed when we were teenagers. Are we any worse off? A Bel-Aire Home Owner

Walking Still Poor

Dear Editor:

Upon reading the report in your paper on the changes made during the year of 1957, I observed an item that has not yet materialized. In the month of March, 1957, the township is stated as having "pledged its assistance to the School Board in correcting hazardous walking conditions for school children."

Already nearly half of the school year of 1957-58 has elapsed and still no "safety measures" have been taken. Children are still walking on the "forgotten roads" in the "forgotten areas" of the township. Disgusted

Small children like to do things with their hands. Modeling clay gives them a chance to make shapes. Finger paints let them make pictures with their hands while they learn to appreciate colors.

The basic ingredient of common eyewash, mild boric acid, now has been used to develop a new high-energy fuel on which a jet bomber can fly up to 50 percent farther without refueling.

Hard wood makes better coals for a campfire than soft wood.
