ANTIQUITY OF PORTO RICO

When First Occupied by Man It May Have Been Connected With South America.

Ethnologists have reason for thinking that Porto Rico and the adjoining islands may have been peopled from the valley of the Orinoco instead of from Yucatan. When first occupied by man Porto Rico may have been a part of a peninsula connected with South America. Its fauna and flora are of the South American type, and it contains relics of a forgotten race which show evidence of a high grade of culture. Few traces of these aborigines are now to be found except in the interior of the island. Among the curious remains are stone-enclosed plazas on which ceremonial dances were performed. The remains of carved idols and pottery show no small degree of skill and taste. No traces of stone buildings resembling those of the Mayas are found, but the houses are of the South American type. The manner of disposing of the dead also resembled that practiced in the valley of the Orinoco.—Harper's Weekly.

FRANCE HAS OFFICIAL COOK

New Chair of Culinary Art Has Been Established in National School at Grignon.

France now has an official cook with the title of professor of cooking at the National School of Agricultural and Household Instruction at Grignon. A title worthy of even a German business card, is the comment of the French newspapers.

The new chair of cooking is the idea of M. Pams, minister of agriculture. The examinations, held on November 11, in order to choose the holder of this momentous title, consisted of competitions in all branches, the making of soups, sauces and other accessories, cutting and cooking meat, game, fish, vegetables, entrees, patties, entremets, pastry, fruit and vegetable preserves and the making of cakes and desserts.

Those who took part in the competition were requested to get up a luncheon, the menu of which was chosen before the examination by the jury. The contestants also had to prepare preserves and give a lesson before the students of the school. All candidates who presented themselves had to be between the ages of twenty-five and forty and conform to many other requirements, such as being able to show their birth certificates, a certificate showing their French nationality and also what previous experience they had.

Best French cooks come, it is said, from the district around Nancy, although Lorraine until it became German property had a great reputation.—New York Sun.

STUPENDOUS PHILANTHROPIES.

The list of American benefactions in sums of $10,000 and upward amounts this year to $327,000,000. The sum is stupendous when compared with that in any European country, but not abnormal in our own. The largest contribution comes from J. Pierpont Morgan instead of from Carnegie or Rockefeller, as for many years past, and is made up almost wholly of art treasures presented to the Metropolitan museum. This probably means that when the Carnegie Corporation and the Rockefeller Foundation have been completely endowed we shall have no more such huge donations from single individuals. The determination of the people to prevent any further accumulations of such wealth through monopoly and privilege virtually assures the end of that regime. The passing of Mr. Morgan to the head of the list may mean the beginning of a new era in our philanthropies.

"WALDEN."

Thoreau's "Walden" is the only book of its kind in the world, as able as it is unique, and the man who has never read it can never become informed concerning it from mere hearsay. It must suffice to say that if you will read "Walden" through carefully and lovingly, and keep on reading it until you shall have made it a part of the very tissue of your brain, you will be able to say goodbye to all fear and worry. It will make you self-respecting, self-reliant and free from the spirit of fear and cringing.—Chicago Examiner.

SO IT GOES.

"You used to want to hold my hand before we were married," she complained.
"I'd like to now," said he easily, "but it would keep you from your housework, my dear."
