receive has not kept pace with the increased costs to furnish these services. A comprehensive study which has recently been completed indicates the need for additional tax revenue from the various units of government and schools above and beyond the present tax limitations.

We understand that the State is presently studying various tax proposals which would increase revenues for the State. We would also like to have consideration given at this time to proposals for a broadened tax base for local governments. We would appreciate having our proposal reconsidered before the State Legislature finalizes any tax program. We therefore request an opportunity to have local government heard on the proposal which is being suggested by the groups which are represented herein.

Respectfully,
Delos Hamlin, Chairman.

FOR THE PAST couple of weeks, seniors and their parents have been bustling about making final preparations for various graduation activities the first part of June. Although not as noticeable, there has also been considerable activity at the other end of the educational ladder. Parents of five year olds and those who will be five prior to December 1 have been taking their youngsters to the kindergarten rooms at the various schools for their first educational experiences in the classroom.

At the same time parents have been provided with information on school regulations and what to expect from their youngsters during the first few weeks of school in the fall.

While one mother, child at hand, talks with the teacher, left, another mother and her son, at right, look over the facilities in the kindergarten room at the William Grace School.

It's back to school for the township fire chiefs and the chief of police - only the schools are at annual conventions.

The township board voted Tuesday night to send the three present fire chiefs to the annual convention next month at Chelsea, and to include the new fire chief and his assistant for the fourth station, a new one on which final details are being worked out this week. As reported earlier, it will be located near Kendallwood subdivision.

June Suburbia Today Filled With Light Summer Reading

Airy, interesting reading is in store for readers in the June issue of Suburbia Today, the smart color magazine which appears with The Enterprise the first of each month.

There is a special report on what the future holds for suburban newlives.

Lois and Don are a young couple who plan to be married this summer. They will settle down in a small apartment in Evanston, a suburb of Chicago. How well do their personal plans fit in with what university studies and sociological statistics say will happen to them during their married life? They want four children. The statistical average is 3.4. They want eventually to build their own home. The sociologists say they will move four times, and their "silver anniversary move" may be back to the city. This month we take you through the next 30 years or so and see what lies ahead for them and for thousands of other Americans who will soon be young marrieds in Suburbia.

June is vacation month, and there is a story about the hazards involved in leaving your house unprotected from burglars while you are away - and an outline on how to burglar-proof your house before you leave.

There is also a first-hand account of a man who left the turmoil of the hurried and harried commutier's pace for a job close to home. He now saves over a thousand hours a year in traveling time alone, which he turns into a thousand hours more free time with his family.

"A Summer To Grow On" speaks for the children, and urges us to provide enough space and air and solitude this summer to give them room to grow in - spiritually as well as physically.

Our food pages feature a complete menu for a bridal shower. Add a wedding cake and the festive menu would serve for a wedding reception as well.

Card of Thanks

We wish to extend a sincere "Thank You" to all our friends and neighbors for their cards, memorials and other expressions of sympathy at the time of recent bereavement. We are truly grateful.
