Start Blueberry

Industry Here

30 Years Old

Thirty years of "blues" blueberries from Michigan.

Just about 30 years ago, the cultivated blueberry industry started in Michigan. Today, blue berries are harvested and furnished an annual supply of 900,000 12-pint crates of blueberries to Michigan and other states.

This year's crop of blueberries is not a record breaker, reports the MSU Marketing Agent, but there are plenty. The season is under way now.

September is the time enough for eating, canning and freezing blueberries. Largest supplies come during the first part of August.

It is blueberry time all year long. About half the crop comes to market in the first half of the year, counter. The other half comes by way of canned blueberries, jam, preserves, frozen blueberries and frozen pies.

A pint of blueberries goes a long way says Mrs. Josephine Lawyer. There is practically no waste—hardly even a berry left in a pint cup. They are good keepers. You will probably never have to find out for sure, but blueberries will keep for 10 days in the refrigerator.

If you are "just tasting", serve blueberries on your cereal one morning, have blueberry pancakes for breakfast another, and you may even be enough for blueberry fruit cup of Sunday. Like your pie plump and juicy? Allow 1 1/2 to 2 pints of blueberries for an 8 to 9 inch pie.

"Easy freeze" is the word for blueberries. Plan to use them for pie, or other cooking? Pack them in airtight containers. For fresh fruit desserts, wash blueberries for freezing in a 40 percent syrup made by adding three cups of sugar to four cups of water. Cool the syrup before using.

Plan Ad Campaign To Attract Tourists.

In anticipation of further boosting Michigan's tourist attractions, the Michigan Tourist Council, at its July meeting in Lansing, approved a $200,750 advertising campaign for the 1959-60 fiscal year.

The promotional efforts will be concentrated in Michigan's prime mid-west tourist market area and will continue to emphasize the state's year-round vacation attractions.

"All tourist economy needs year-round business with vigorous promotion of what were once called off-seasons," said MTC Chairman Robert Wooley of Mt. Pleasant.

Hawaii has added a touch of royalty to the U.S., according to the World Book Encyclopedia. Iolani Palace, the former home of Hawaiian kings, is the only royal palace in the nation.
