A rural postmaster tells this story of one of the patrons of his office, a boy of thrity, not to six penurious, stock. When the lad comes into the postoffice he will thrust, his wizaned face up close to the window and, in his slow, Yankee drawl, inquire most earnestly:
"He vye got ony postal cards?"
"Yes," the postmaster replies.
"How much be they 'day?"
"A cent aplece."
"Then the boy, screwing up his eves in the intensity of his thought over the questro he has to decide, always stops for a while to weigh the consequences. Finally, he will reply solemnly:
