

At Home in Old Homestead

Jacqueline Davis GR. 4-1230

The Spooners—Al, Bobbie, and Charlie—returned recently from a ten day vacation near Munising. They spent the time fishing, hiking, reading and resting at a cabin in the Hiawatha National Forest.

Tom, and Betty Quaine enjoyed their annual trip to Chicago recently. They left home on Thursday and returned a week ago Monday after watching the All Star game and visiting the races among other things. The boys—Tommy, Tim, and Brian visited Betty's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Roe in Highland Park, during this time.

After the family returned home from their separate vacations they made a joint trip on the Bob-Lo boat on Wednesday.

TERRY SIMMONS, Shirley and Billy, nine year old daughter, was a house guest in Frenon last week. She visited with her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Simmons, and their family from Sunday until last Thursday. Their daughter, Ruth, was a recent visitor in Old Homestead.

Last week, Carolyn and Ken Rowe kept their 14 month old nephew, Richard Rowe from Livonia, while his parents were vacationing. Their own son, Jonathan, is only 11 months old which made last week at the Rowe's a very busy one.

Clara Nichols of Steele Rd. injured her back while working at home about six weeks ago. She is not wearing a body cast, which must be a blessing in this hot weather, but all movement is painful and even lying still is very uncomfortable.

On Wednesday Mark Wiedman celebrated his fifth birthday with a nautical party. The guests, Rocky Nieto, Charlie Spooner, Carolyn and Susan, Roy Brack, Marianne Klot, and Mark's cousins, Tim and Mike O'Neill from Detroit, arrived in a boat decorated to resemble a sailing ship. The cake bore the inscription "S. Mark, and the other S. S. happy birthday."

CONGRATULATIONS are due to Dorothy and David Kull who celebrated their twenty-fourth wedding anniversary last Friday.

Another birthday this week was that of Kim Odo, daughter of Charles and Ann Odo of Steele Rd. A picnic supper with about twenty guests, including both sets of grandparents as well as aunts, uncles and cousins helped Kim celebrate her second birthday.

Gayle, Ken and Kay Humm's 12 year old daughter, arrived home on Monday following a four day stay at Woodward General Hospital in Highland Park.

On Friday Gayle underwent foot surgery. She came home well bandaged with her toes sticking off the foot all of this week.

Marge and Jim Christian are the proud parents of a daughter, Barbara Rae. The 7 lb. 9 ounce infant was born at 12:19 a.m. Monday at Osego County Memorial Hospital in Gaylord, Michigan. Marge and her sons—Norman, Chris, Randy, and Danny—have been waiting for this event at the home of Marge's aunt, Mrs. Richard Mount at Osego. When Marge and Barbara leave the hospital they will go to the Christian's cottage at Heart Lake before returning to Farmington so that the boys can start school.

It's He, Not She

A story in last week's issue of The Enterprise referred to Roberta Jean Spaller as "R. J. Spaller, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Spaller of Farmington." The mistake occurred when a news release used by The Enterprise was incorrect. The mistake is corrected here: Roberta Jean Spaller, a recent Farmington high graduate is assigned to duty at the Naval Air station, Pensacola, Florida.

Roberta is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Spaller, 2116 Albion, Farmington.

Timely Tips on

GARDENING

By Betty Frankel

VINES—Always have a unique decorative quality in the garden. They can clothe a blank wall, conceal an unsightly view, enhance the architectural lines of the house, and add a third dimension to the garden scene.

Some vines are annuals and some are woody perennials. Some owe their charm to lustreous green foliage, while others are noted for their flamboyant flowers. Still others are outstanding because of the brilliant coloring their foliage assumes in Autumn, or because of interesting fruit.

There is a vine for every purpose and care should be used in selecting the proper vine. First consideration is the means of climbing and support. Some vines, such as ivy and clematis, cling by means of small root-like holdfasts. Others, such as wisteria and bittersweet, twine themselves about their support, and still others, including clematis, climb by means of twining tendrils.

The size of the space to be covered should be considered. Some vines grow quickly and reach greater heights than others. Some produce a delicate leafy covering, while others quickly form a dense mat of growth.

Annual vines must be planted in the Spring, but Fall is good time to plant hardy vines. Since almost every property could be enhanced by a carefully chosen, well located vine, now is the time for the gardener to survey the situation and plan to plant a vine to add charm to a lamp-post, to grow in the swag across a front entrance, or to cascade over an old tree stump in the back yard.

ANNUAL VINES—Morning glories are the best known annual vines and everyone is familiar with the white, pink, red or blue flowers that open wide in the early part of the day and close by mid-afternoon. Less well known are the oriental morning glories that have delicate, fragile looking flowers. Moonflower is a species closely related to the common morning glories, but the white blossoms open at dusk. It is fascinating to see the tightly rolled buds unfurl in two or three minutes into fully opened flowers.

Other colorful annual vines are cardinal climber, climbing nasturtium, and scarlet runner bean. The lovely red flowers of the latter vine are followed by a crop of edible beans.

Courds are another interesting annual climber. The foliage is lush and attractive and the yellow blossoms are large and quite spectacular. The most interesting feature is the fruit. A seemingly endless variety of fruit types and color variations are produced, especially by the small fruited forms.

HARDY VINES—A Among the woody vines ivy is most popular. Some varieties are evergreen, while some, such as Boston ivy, shed their leaves in winter. Winter creeper, euonymus fortunei, is an evergreen vine that is suitable for a spot that is only moderately high.

There are many hardy vines that flower during the summer. These can provide a trouble-free source of color at a time when the gardener wishes to relax and minimize his labors. These vines flout their flowers on a high level so that they can easily be seen and enjoyed from all parts of the garden.

Trumpet vine, a hardy, almost rampant grower that has graceful fronds of rich green foliage and abundant clusters of flame, yellow or apricot trumpet shaped flowers, can be seen climbing to the second story of many houses or clambering over fences or tall forms in season.

Polygonum, or silver lace vine, is another lush grower. This vine, which reaches a height of fifteen to twenty feet, is covered throughout the summer with frothy white blossoms. It must have full sun and therefore does best with an eastern or southern exposure.

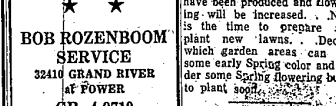

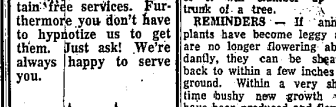

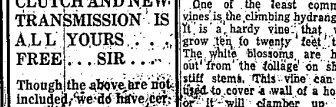

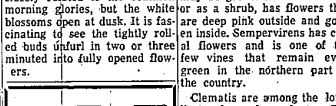

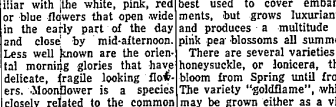

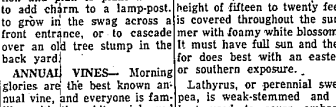

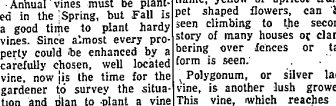

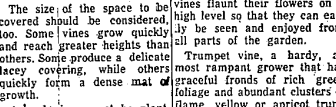

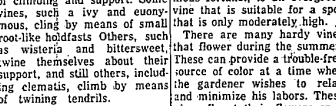

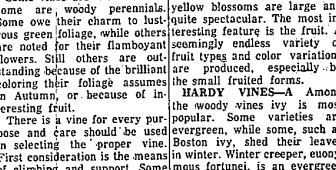

Lathyrus, or perennial sweet pea, is weak-stemmed and is best used to cover embankments, but grows luxuriantly and produces a multitude of pink pea blossoms all summer.

There are several varieties of honeysuckle, or Lonicera, that bloom from Spring until frost. The variety "Goldflame" which may be grown either as a vine or as a shrub, has flowers that are deep pink outside and golden inside. Sempervirens has coral buds in late summer and early fall, and the variety Mrs. Robert Brydson is at the peak of its bloom during August and September. It grows eight to ten feet tall and bears, pale blue flowers.

One of the least common vines is the climbing hydrangea. It is a hardy vine that will grow ten to twenty feet tall. The white blossoms are held out from the foliage on short stiff stems. This vine can be used to cover a wall of a house or it will clamber up the trunk of a tree.

REMEMBERS— If annual plants have become leggy and are no longer flowering abundantly, they can be sheared back to within a few inches of ground. Within a very short time bushy new growth will have been produced and flowering will be increased. Now is the time to prepare and plant new lawns. Decide which garden areas can use some early Spring flowering bulbs to plant soon.
