Noted Author To Be at OLS This Sunday

The PTA at Our Lady of Sorrows School will have Margaret Williamson at 10:30 a.m. The well known author will be in Open House, Sunday afternoon, Nov. 22.

Margaret Williamson is the author of "The First Book of Birds," "The First Book of Bugs," and "The First Book of Mammals," which books have been acclaimed by book reviewers, parents, teachers, and librarians as a real contribution to the world of children's literature. Artist as well as author, she has included bright, charming, huzzing pictures, as well as scientifically accurate drawings and paragraphs on bugs, birds and mammals.

The author will be on hand from 4 to 5 o'clock to autograph copies of her books in the Out Lady of Sorrows High School auditorium.

Margaret Williamson, known as Mrs. Charles Peterson of Franklin Village, first became interested in natural history in her childhood, when her family moved to a farm in the remote reaches of Quebec. Later, as a student at McGill University, she majored in biology, and after graduation, studied and worked in the field of ornithology. All of her books have been commended by authorities in the field of natural history.

The New York Herald says of her "First Book of Birds," "What bug has its bars in its knees?" "What is the difference between a doodlebug, a tumblebug, a ladybug and a firefly?" "Can a spider web be repaired if broken?"

In her "First Book of Bugs" she talks of bugs with extra lively like windshield, death-works like chisels, nutcrackers, rekes and sieves. The Audubon Society says the book contains all the necessary information to satisfy children's curiosity. Written in an easy-to-understand style, it contains drawings as gay as a bird's song and as true to life as birds themselves.

Her "First Book of Mammals" is written in the same delightful style and is crammed with interesting facts and pictures, a splendid introduction to the world of animals around us.

Base Your Decision on Facts

To the Editor:

One of the most certain ways to make oneself unpopular is to oppose a school tax. This is because School Boards have considerable power to the extent that to oppose a school tax is to impose sub-standard educational facilities on their children.

If a proposed school tax appears to be meeting opposition, School Boards, in their efforts to win, resort to various comparisons which show your school system as average or below and, as insurance, they hint about half-day sessions, crowded classrooms, etc. One should remember that schools are not competitive enterprises and should not be allowed to become one.

Consequently, as a parent I feel compelled to speak up for Farmington residents. We want the best for our children and will do all in our power to get it. Our continued ability to provide a good home, good food and good clothing is equally as important to our children as good schools. I feel that any new or increased taxes will hamper the ability to provide properly for our children.

In the past four years Farmington school taxes have increased over $100.00 for the average homeowner and in the past year taxes in other areas have taken a giant stride. In the year 1958, Americans paid $98,400,000,000 in federal, state and local taxes. This amounts to about $100 per family, man, woman and child. These figures do not include $110,000,000 in new taxes which the State government wants.

One, as a conscientious citizen, and parent, must unemotionally consider this proposed tax increase in the light of whether it is really necessary. In review of the school district's financial statement for July 1959 will definitely determine your decision. The Farmington school system appeared to be in an enviable position only four months ago.

J.P. Hommel, Bel-Aire High School Parent and Taxpayer

EDITORS REPLY: We feel that we must take issue with several of the comments made in this letter written by Joseph Hommel.

First of all, we want to point out that factual information on classroom needs, teachers' salaries, schedules compared with other districts, etc. is constantly being discussed and reviewed by school officials. None of the factual information presented by this newspaper relative to the school election proposals is new. Much of it has been printed and all of it discussed at School Board meetings. We suggest that Mr. Hommel attend some of these meetings. We have never seen him there.

Secondly, schools are a competitive enterprise. Good teachers, like employees in any other field, seek jobs where they can get the most pay. Unless salary schedules are kept in line with those of other districts, only the poorer caliber of teachers will be attracted here.

Mr. Hommel is also a little off-base in his statement about

7 from Here Are Successful Deer-Hunting

Among the numerous residents of Farmington who joined the army of deer hunters heading north last week-end was a seven-member party that quickly bagged the limit.

Headed by Mr. and Mrs. Deos Hamlin, the group included Trace Conroy, Bill Conroy, John Clappion, Frank Schwien and Harrison Johnson. Schwien enjoyed the first success and killed his buck about 8 a.m. Sunday.

The rest followed suit soon thereafter.

THE SEASON opened at daylight Sunday.

Trace Conroy nailed a 140-lb. seven-point buck, his tenth since first going deerhunting in 1956. Bill Conroy shot a 160-lb. seven-point. The others also got good-sized bucks.

The group was joined by four hunters from South Lyon. They included Delos Hamlin, last year's champion, and his son, Earl, who was the headhunter. The four South Lyon hunters also returned with deer.

Seek Trading Stamps Also

Trading stamps and trading stamp books of any variety have been added to the list of donations that members of the Farmington Junior Chamber of Commerce Auxiliary are seeking to help mentally retarded children at the Farmington unit of the Plymouth State Home and Training School.

J.C. Auxiliary members are also seeking playpens, strollers, tables, rockers and other youth items of this nature as well as outdoor clothing for children in the 2 to 9 age group.

All items donated or obtained will be turned over to the home and training school here which has been established for the care of retarded youth. Besides caring for these youngsters, personnel try to teach the children to learn how to associate with others like them and possibly get along in life away from the home, a spokesman for the JC women's group said.

At Teachers' Meet in Lansing

Edith J. Powers attended a Department of Classroom Teachers board of directors meeting at Michigan State University, November 13-14.

Key topics discussed were DCT finances, officer's reports, appointment of new committee members, arrangements for winter and spring meetings and reports from the legislative, projects, secondary council and publications committees.

Edith J. Powers, a member of the DCT's Research Committee, was one of 30 educators in attendance.

The DCT, a department of the Michigan Education Association, is headed by Elsie Greeting Fremont.

Among the newly registered architects was Roy J. Strick-faden, 30769 Glenmore, Farmington. Ernest J. Bunning, of 20740 LaMura Drive was registered as a mechanical engineer and John F. Henige of 68120 Springland Drive as a civil engineer.

Frito Intends To Expand Here

Frito-Nicolay Dancy Co., nationally-known maker of potato chips, plans eventually to construct a new administrative headquarters in the City of Farmington, it was learned recently.

However, the firm's actual expansion here will, very likely, be in the distant future, indicated E. L. Nicolay, a vice-president of the company. "We have not set a date for the construction," Nicolay said last week.

"Nor are the plans for the expansion totally developed," he added.

Since 1955, the Frito company has owned approximately 12 acres of land on Nine-Mile road, west of Farmington road. A potato warehouse is located there now. It was built in 1957.

Eventually, Frito intends to enlarge its present facilities there to include an administrative division headquarters and possibly even a potato chip manufacturing outlet, explained Nicolay.
