susiness Needs Unity

A meeting of Farmington business and prossional people was teld last Wednesday night, ith about 45 or so in attendance.

That more were jot present tan he attrib, ted partially to the fact that it was on the same, ight as the Farmington Exchange Club's anual dinner; meetings. Several indicated that hey would have liked to have been present but ad made previous commitments to attend the general bays intention. Arringements for he special bysinessmen's meeting had advanced to far before it was learned that this conflicted ith the Exchange Club get-together.

the fact before it was learned that this continued by the hard was defined with the Exchange Club get-together.

We are reasonably certain, however, that with May and Linds, from Disveral local business and professional people from working the hard was deer not in attendance at either of these functions. Apathy on the part of many can account for the part of many can account for the poor turnout. In our opinion, it is between the part of the professional transfer of the professional transfer of the professional people for the professional people for the second was the mother. In the professional people for the people
