Stray Dog Control A Real Problem

Dogs roaming loose in the community has been a problem for the past several years. Considerable property damage has been done and a number of dog bites have been reported.

The problem has continued to get worse instead of better as the years have passed and complaints have been coming in with more and more regularity.

The stern measures to curb the situation now being called for by the township board are coming none too soon, in our opinion. Every possible effort must be taken to protect the property of community residents and taxpayers as well as protecting them from bodily harm.

The big question that now arises in our mind is just how well the township is equipped to carry out an effective program and one that will really solve the stray dog problem.

We just can't visualize how an already understaffed police department can take on this added duty of complete dog control in an area as large as Farmington Township. Excluding the City of Farmington and even the two incorporated villages within the township, the eight-man township police force still has over 30 square miles of area to provide police protection for. Even with some auxiliary police help, this is a mighty big job for eight men on a 24 hour, seven day a week basis.

Although police have been answering dog bite and dog damage cases for some time, they have been somewhat limited in what action they could take. Anything the township board can do to give police more authoritative power in connection with the stray dog problem we wholeheartedly feel should be done.

Unfortunately, it does not appear that this alone will be enough to solve the problem of dogs roaming freely although it may be helpful in at least reducing the seriousness of the situation a bit.

A separate department with one or two full time dog wardens is the real answer. But this sort of luxury can just not be afforded by a community like Farmington Township that is forced to operate on the funds that a tax of only 86¢ per $1,000 equalized valuation will yield.

Some of the problems with stray dogs traveling in packs can be laid on people from other areas bringing their unwanted dogs here and dumping them. But, community citizens can not be held blameless either. Many local residents are also letting their dogs run loose.

It would not only behoove dog owners to keep their own dogs tied up or under close watch but inform their neighbors that there is a law against dogs running loose. Then, if the neighbor did not take heed, it would also be their obligation to report the matter to proper authorities.

Stern action against violators in the form of fines and/or jail sentences, and especially repeat performers, as called for by the township board last week should help curb the situation. But all the laws in the world will not solve the problem without the help of an actively interested citizenry. This applies everywhere but it even trues in Farmington Township where limited funds are available for an adequate enforcement agency.

Community Clean-Up

Spring is just around the corner even though winter's late arrival may have some wondering if it will ever come. Looking back into past history, it always has. We are reasonably certain it won't fail us this year.

Spring is clean-up time both inside and out and we feel that now is not too early to start making some plans. We would like to propose one of the biggest clean-up, fix-up, spruce-up campaigns ever undertaken in this community.

One small section of the community, the one square mile area incorporated as Wood Creek Farms Village, has already laid its plans. They are modeled after a highly successful Spring clean-up campaign held last year. Their campaign is planned this year for the period from April 20-30.

We would like to see the governmental bodies of the other 35 square mile area making up our total Farmington community follow this lead and start formalizing some plans for a similar clean-up, fix-up, spruce-up campaign.

Well laid plans can and should be made soon for special pickups of trash and debris during a specified week to ten day period if such a clean-up campaign as we are proposing is to be a success.

But plans alone are not enough. Action in carrying out the purpose of the plans in the first place is necessary. And this is where each and every citizen comes into the picture. Only with the cooperation of every subdivision, section of the community and individual property owner can a campaign of this nature be carried out real successfully.

Service and fraternal organizations such as the Junior Chamber of Commerce, Exchange Club, Downtown Business District Assn., Kiwanis, Lions, garden club groups, etc. might also lend a big hand. Working closely with city and township officials and work crews, members of these organizations might do much in seeing that several undeveloped areas were spruced up considerably.

The results of a week to ten day long clean up effort the latter part of April—everyone cooperating—could result in a very much cleaner community and one which citizens could say they live in with much more pride.
